Gov't to Control Land Use in Province

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

A Provincial Land Commission with sweeping powers to control land use in British Columbia and designate land for agricultural, greenbelt, recreational or urban land bank purposes will be set up under legislation introduced Thursday by Agriculture minister Dave Stupich.

The five-member commission will get $25 million for buying up agricultural land in the province and another $33 million for the other purchases from special funds already provided for parkland, greenbelt, and land bank acquisition.

One of the key provisions of the legislation is that there is no automtic right to compensation for land designated under any of the four categories.

This means, Stupich told a press conference immediately after the Land Commission Act was given first reading, that the government doesn't admit that in designating land for any of the four purposes "we have affected its value."

Equally, however, it doesn't mean the land won't be purchased, he said.

He stressed there is no power of expropriation in the act and nothing that will stop the farmer from selling his land to anyone.

"But the purchaser knows that if it is designated farmland the odds are he will never be able to do anything but farm it," unless he can show why the land should be exempted.

Under the legislation, any bylaw or regulation of a municipality or regional district which conflicts with the provisions of the act or its accompanying regulations is declared invalid.

Stupich said he expects the legislation will be passed at this session of the legislature and proclaimed by the end of April.

One section of the act incorporates the provisions of the order-in-council passed last Dec. 21, under which no local authority may rezone agricultural land to any other use and no buildings may be erected on farmland. The legislation, when passed, will supersede that order and be retroactive to Dec. 21.

Stupich said he expects to start approaching people to serve on the commission within two or three weeks. His department has already started working out "gross boundaries," defining the various areas of land in B.C. that have been designated for agricultural, greenbelt, recreational or land bank purposes.

These boundaries, he said, will also likely be known by the end of April.

Any landowner who feels his property should not have been designated may appeal for exemption, but this exemption will have to be approved by the provincial cabinet.

Not all such applications need be on an individual basis, however, Stupich said. In some cases involving land on the outskirts of municipalities whose agricultural value was questionable, dozens of applications might be dealt with in a blanket decision.

FARM PROTEST

VERNON (CP) — The president of the British Columbia Federation of Agriculture, Charles Bernhardt, has called on farmers to take strong action against the government's proposed new farmland preservation legislation. Bernhardt said today he will recommend to B.C. growers that they cease work on this year's crop.

He said it's clear the provincial government has an absolute disregard for the individual land owner and certainly for the farmer. The federation will protest in whatever manner it can, he said, with the possibility of a protest demonstration in Victoria.

Door Slams On Mining

By BRIAN BUTTERS
Times Staff

The provincial government slammed the door shut Thursday on future mineral development in all B.C. parks.

The news came in the legislature from Resources Minister Bob Williams, who announced a sweeping new policy for land use within the province's network of provincial parks, coming down particularly hard on the operations of Western Mines in Strathcona Provincial Park on Vancouver Island. The minister also announced plans to establish a number of new parks throughout the province.

Williams said Western Mines will have to abide by the following rules if it wishes to continue its operations in Strathcona:

Application must be made to the parks branch before any timber is removed from the park.

—A permit for construction of a townsite at Ralph River, granted by the former Social Credit administration, is to be rescinded.

—Plans for disposing of tailings from the mine operation will first have to be cleared through the parks branch.

—Stumpage rates being charged Western Mines will be three times the going rate for operations inside Strathcona.

—Damming of lakes and streams in the area around the mine's operations to provide power will not be allowed.

Williams also said it will be "useless" for any mining companies to either stake or attempt to record any mineral claims inside any provincial park territory. Any pending claims on territory inside five B.C. parks he named will be denied by the authorities within his department.

Williams said legislation will be introduced this session to bring control of waterways inside provincial parks back to the parks branch, where he said it had been before the Social Credit government

$ Drubbed: Monetary Crisis Looms

Times News Services

The U.S. dollar took a drubbing in panicky trading on European money markets today, bringing hints of a new monetary crisis. The price of gold zoomed to new highs touching $95 an ounce but later settled to $85.

The dollar steadied after government banks intervened and bought up dollars to keep it at the price set by the recent 10 per cent devaluation.

"Something has to be done," one London currency dealer said when the dollar sank to its lowest point since devaluation. "We can't go on like this."

Gold skyrocketed to $95 per ounce early today on London's free market and went to new highs in Zurich, Rome and Hong Kong.

But at the London afternoon price fixing the price dropped for the first time in two weeks.

The dollar's plunge and gold's climb were directly related.

London dealers said speculators and international money managers simply did not trust the dollar over the weekend, when exchanges are closed and government decisions on currency rates usually come.

They were switching instead into almost anything else — gold, silver, Swiss francs, marks, tin, copper, even the once-weak British pound.

A West German government spokesman said the central bank intervention was brief and small scale — it bought less than $10 million, compared with the $6 billion it bought in the crisis before dollar devaluation two weeks ago.

Arab World Seethes

Times News Services

The Arab world today seethed with demands for revenge against Israel for the shooting down of a Libyan airliner over the Sinai Desert.

The semi-official Cairo newspaper Al Ahram today called on Arab guerrillas to strike Israeli targets throughout the world "to show that in this jungle the Israeli wolf is not supreme."

And Egyptian vice-president Hussein Shaffei hinted today that his nation may end the shaky Middle East ceasefire and resume its "war of attrition" with Israel.

"If the enemy wants to scare us, we will tell him we are waiting in our positions here and as a minimum we can get him back to the situation of 1970 and make him exhausted," Shafei said.

In 1969, and up until Aug. 7, 1970, when a U.S.-initiated ceasefire took effect, Egypt and Israel fought almost daily artillery duels and staged raids across the Suez Canal.

"We ask God to give us strength to make the enemy exhausted through guerrilla action and political and economic means," Shafei said.

"We are a nation of faith and know that Israel is not liked by anybody in this world . . . the Zionists are the enemies of humanity and they cannot find anybody to love them," he said.

In Rabat, King Hassan II of Morocco, regarded by the West as a moderate, said he will send army troops to Syria to fight Israel. Previously, he has refused to commit Moroccan troops to such action.

Hassan did not say how many troops he would send from his 52,000-man army but he said only volunteers would go.

He said he was taking the action in response to Israeli "aggression."

U.S. Resumes Bombing Laos

Times News Services

The United States has resumed limited air activity over Laos in response to a request from Laotian Premier Souvanna Phouma.

However, officials in Washington said details would have come from the U.S. Pacific Command in Honolulu.

White House press secretary Ronald Ziegler said, meanwhile, that the U.S. is hopeful that the ceasefire would be fully implemented soon and that the renewed fighting would end.

In Vientiane, Souvanna met the secretary-general of the pro-Communist Pathet Lao secretly today after accusing them and "foreign troops" of breaking the ceasefire.

"Since the cease-fire agreement went into effect at noon Thursday there have been 29 recorded violations, throughout the kingdom. About 90 per cent of the violations have been committed by foreign troops," Souvanna said.

"I am certainly sure that the United States will respond positively to the request for resumption of the bombing. You will soon hear the other side's reaction about the resumption of the bombing."

In Cambodia, military sources reported heavy casualties on both sides Thursday in a series of attacks by Communist Khmer Rouge guerrillas against three outposts south of Phnom Penh.

In reports of fighting in what is the last official war in Southeast Asia, western military sources said about 2,000 Communists fighting along Highways 2 and 3 are the same guerrillas who cut Highway 1 linking Phnom Penh and Saigon earlier this month.

In Vietnam, procedural disputes among the four members of a truce-keeping team again delayed investigations today into two cases involving violations of the Jan. 28 cease-fire.

Meanwhile, External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp flies to Paris tonight for the international conference that is purported to guarantee the peace in Vietnam. But informed observers expect little more from the meeting than a rubber stamp on the Jan. 27 ceasefired agreement.

Crown Books Open

For the first time B.C. Hydro books will come under the detailed scrutiny of the legislature's public accounts committee — as soon as next week — to be followed by two other Crown corporations, B.C. Railway and the Liquor Control Board.

At the committee's first business meeting today there was unanimous approval of a motion by Pat McGeer (L — Vancouver-Point Grey) that Hydro's board of directors be asked to send Hydro chairman David Cass-Beggs and any officials considered necessary to help him answer committee questions on Hydro accounts for the fiscal year ending March 31, 1972.

PERSONAL APPEARANCE

McGeer said a personal appearance before the committee is essential because the public accounts relating to Hydro are in such consolidated form that it is impossible to pick out points of detail.

McGeer also said he wants the committee to use the procedure for detailed examination of the accounts of B.C. Railway and the Liquor Control Board, in that order.

On another motion from the MLA, it was agreed that individual committee members will be allowed the help of personal staff, including secretaries and special assistants, in taking notes from government vouchers that are made available for inspection on request.

Such facilities are needed, he said, if MLAs are to be saved many hours of laborious note-taking. As an example, McGeer cited the difficulty involved last year in probing the "rather strange" and bulky travel vouchers relating to Phil Gaglardi, the former Social Credit rehabilitation minister.

Earlier, when comptroller-general John Minty told the committee about customary arrangements for voucher examination, with his own staff in attendance to help MLAs, McGeer reacted testily.

"Public accounts must be public accounts," he said.

Socred Plea to Commons

Members of the Social Credit caucus in the B.C. legislature, today, asked the House of Commons to set up a special committee to overturn legislation introduced Thursday by the NDP government which controls all land development in the province. (Earlier reaction on Page 2).

In a telegram to Prime Minister Trueau party leader Frank Richter said the legislation is an enfringement on the basic right of the individual—granted, he said, in the Canadian Bill of Rights — to enjoyment of property.

He said the special committee should hold hearings around the province and recommed to Parliament that the legislation be overturned if it is found to be contrary to the Bill of Rights.

Richter said he was unaware of any precedent for a committee of the House of Commons to overthrow provincial government legislation "but we've never had such vicious legislation as this before," he said.

"The ramifications of this bill are not being understood by the people," Richter said. "Not just farmland, but all land in the province is affected."

WORLD WE LIVE IN FAST GOING MAD

Times News Services

TORONTO — Even if the world doesn't come to a bad end through over-population and pollution, changing conditions may drive everybody crazy, says Dr. Daniel Cappon, a psychiatrist and professor of environmental studies at York University in Toronto.

He posed the questions:

Is mental pollution rather than chemical pollution the real threat to mankind, especially in North America?

Will the din of industrial construction, the tensions of over-crowding, and the stresses of the "rat race" life in large cities eventually drive large segments of the population literally mad?

And will ultimately only the "intellectually elite" survive in any strength to carry on the human race to bigger and better things — only the mentally superior who are able to best cope with and adjust to life's growing "psycho-social bombardment"?

Most important, has this "survival of the mentally fittest" process already begun?

Cappon said "yes" to all his own questions.

And he suggested to science writers Thursday at the Ontario Science Centre that in this context, man's "limits to mental growth" may be the crucial factor in determining how and perhaps whether man survives even intellectually, especially if little is done to attack the causes of today's multifaceted environmental problems.

Cappon noted that there has been a massive increase in the rate of mental illness, emotional and psychosomatic illness in recent years "to the point that every other person living on Manhattan Island is receiving or in need of psychiatric care."

He detailed other symptoms of the accelerating alienation and psychological disturbances among the populace, concluding that it would seem that unless these problems are overcome and the trends are reversed, "we've had it anyway, mentally if not physically."

But do not fear.

Cappon, after painting a rather disturbing picture of the possible magnitude and consequences of mental pollution, adds that he is optimistic about the outcome.

First, he thinks that man will solve the problems of physical pollutants without too much difficulty. And, with this in mind, he calls for restraint in "dooms-day" predictions, since this tends to stir up the anxieties of people and make the psychological problems worse.

The mental pollution problem is a different kettle of fish, containing good and bad.

On the one hand, he suggests a large number of people are going to succumb to the increasing "psycho-social bombardment."

On the other hand, he firmly believes in the capacity of man's brain to improve and, it is hoped, to adapt to mental stresses.

He suggests that only the "intellectual elite" will likely be able to take advantage of this mental flexibility and brainpower reserve in adapting to the changing environment.

Shafts Pierce Darkened House

The comments flew thick and fast through the murk Thursday afternoon when the lights went out for five minutes in the legislature.

The blackout, caused by a high-voltage fault in the submarine transmission cables which supply Vancouver Island from the mainland was general on the island, and lasted between five and 30 minutes.

Speaker Gordon Dowding recessed the legislature after members pointed out that the Hansard recording equipment was not working during the power failure.

Remarks caught by reporters, if not by Hansard equipment, were:

To the NDP from the Social Credit opposition: "You finally did it — you turned off all the lights in the province."

To the Socreds from the NDP: "Bennett's back."

To the Liberals, who were about to move non-confidence in the government: "Just another stalling tactic."

To restore power, all island generation was increased and the standby gas turbine station at Chemainus was brought into operation. Service was mostly restored within a half hour, in many places much sooner than that.

A B.C. Hydro spokesman said the specific cause of the fault in the submarine cable has not been determined but is being investigated.

Gas Cuts Next

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States faces a gasoline shortage this spring and summer that could be as serious as the current drought of fuel oil, a Senate sub-committee was told Thursday.

"We are most definitely facing a very serious gasoline crisis," Robert de Blois, chairman of the board of the New England Fuel Institute, told the sub-committee on executive reorganization and government research.

"It's going to affect the independent section of the gasoline business first. It's already happening a little in New England but more in the Midwest."

School Board Approves $29.7M Budget

Total spending of $29.73 million was given tentative approved by Greater Victoria School Board Thursday night at the end of a lengthy finance meeting.

The sum is $2.94 million greater than total spending budgeted in 1972 and the operating portion totalling $24.66 million is $2.45 millioh more than it was for the current year.

The board's operating budget represents 110.5 per cent of the basic education program of $22.3 million, which is shared by the department of education.

Costs above the operating portion for 1973-74 will total $5.07 million, up from $4.59 million, and are largely self-supporting or are non-sharable expenses. They include $1.87 million for summer school, driver training, textbook rentals and similar self-sustaining expenses; $2.77 million for debt services, and $420,000 for non-sharable capital outlays.

District superintendent A. J. Longmore pointed out to trustees at the end of the meeting that the three other B.C. school districts of similar size had approved budget increases of over 111 per cent.

"It's not exactly a giant step forward," chairman Peter Bunn said.

"But we have offset most of the cutbacks of last year. There's some educational betterment in it."

The largest item on the educational bill is $17,915,000 million for teachers' salaries and fringe benefits.

A further $360,000 is budgeted for additional staff and projects.

While arguing the extra staffing allowances, which mean reducing student-teacher ratios, trustee Walter Donald said if teachers had taken more responsibility during salary negotiations the board would be more willing to fight for lower student-teacher ratios.

"If it had not been for that 8.95 per cent increase (awarded to teachers in December) we would have had something to work with," Bunn added.

"It disturbs me greatly that this group is calling our teachers greedy," Trustee William Rose argued. "These raises don't exceed the bounds of those given other groups in the community.

"Maybe they are getting too much, but it's unfair to call them greedy."

The final total figure for teachers' expenses represents a 12-per-cent increase in costs over last year and means about 20 more teachers can be hired. Another 20 teachers will further reduce pupil-teacher ratio because of decreases in pupil enrolment.

Cost of substitute teachers went up almost 20 per cent in the new budget to a total of $329,590.

A 24 per cent increase in carpentry and repair costs was protested by trustee Philip Ney, who was told by Bunn that lumber costs had gone up 100 per cent in 15 months.

"That's our poor deflated forest industry with 95 per cent profits last year that we have to blame for that," Bunn added.

"Maybe we should build classrooms into the sides of mountains," Ney replied.

Board members were told that increases in food costs and service charges had greatly increased home economics costs.

HUMAN GUINEA PIGS 'UNPROTECTED'

WASHINGTON (AP) — A U.S. Senate committee investigating the ethics of human medical experiments has been told of children subjected to asthma attacks, men paid to take LSD, and experimental pregnancies.

Such experiments are widespread, not rare, and subject to no standards aimed at protecting the rights of the human subjects involved, the health committee was told Thursday.

Dr. Robert W. Veatch gave details of case studies compiled by the Institute of Society, Ethics and the Life Sciences, Hastings-On-Hudson, N.Y.

He declined to provide the researchers' names or where the research was conducted.

Dr. Veatch said these included hundreds and perhaps thousands of "experimental pregnancies" produced in tests on the effectiveness of various birth control methods.

Province Closes Park Areas To Mining Firms

changed the law some years ago.

The Socreds changed the law, he said, because they wanted to allow Western Mines to use Buttle Lake as a dumping ground for tailings and to allow Western to dam the streams and lakes around the mine operations as a power supply.

Any future changes in the size of the province's parks will have to be made through the legislature, instead of by cabinet order, he said.

MAJOR PARKS

And as a start, the government will be introducing legislation creating a number of "major" provincial parks in the following areas: near the B.C.-Yukon border; on the Queen Charlotte Islands; at the north end of the Gulf of Georgia, which would be somewhere northeast of Campbell River; near the B.C.-Alberta border, including at least three parks in the area of the East Kootenays.

Williams has said in the past that a number of major parks would be established this session. He has said the total acreage would be around 2.5 million acres, but he gave no figures Thursday on the total acreage involved.

"We are going to be preserving some of that magnificent landscape that the previous administration refused to preserve," Williams said.

TOTAL ACREAGE

He cited figures on total park acreage during the Socred regime which showed the 1952 figure of total parkland as more than nine million acres, falling to 6.5 million acres in 1972.

During that time, he said, the province's population has doubled "and yet the loss of parkland exceeded 2.5 million acres."

Williams termed the situation "probably the greatest retardation of park preservation anywhere in the world in the last 20 years, especially with the growing population and increased awareness of citizens of the necessity to protect the environment."

Deletions from provincial parks, through cabinet orders, created the situation, Williams said, adding that it is a situation which will not be allowed to continue under the NDP government.

Williams went over the history of Stratheona Provincial Park and Western Mines' involvement, saying the mining operation had first been described as a "10-acre hole in the park." The hole had grown, he said, through additional space and land use required for removing concentrates, building bunkhouses, transporting barges across lakes, building townsites, putting in highways. The company paid $2 million for a highway to be built into the operation, he said, but the cost was double that, and the remainder was picked up by the Social Credit government.

Power was then needed to run the mine, so approval was given for lakes and streams to be dammed. And then permission was granted for Buttle Lake to become the depository for mine tailings.

"Once the camel gets into the tent, he destroys the tent entirely," Williams said. The final result was a "major industrial operation" in the middle of a provincial park.

JUST BARELY

The parks branch found itself in the businesses of mining, power development, housing, garbage disposal, transportation and tailings disposal, he said, "and just barely in the parks business."

Williams identified the provincial parks in which pending mineral claims are to be denied as: Stone Mountain Park, Muncho Lake Park, Stratheona, Kokanee Glacier Park and Wells-Grey Park.

About 15 mineral claims are involved, he said.

Williams also read to the house a "major policy change" which will govern in the future the manner in which land is to be used in provincial parks.

LAND-USE LAWS UNVEILED

Any aggrieved landowner may appeal to the Supreme Court, but only, the legislation states, "on a question of law or excess or jurisdiction."

The bill states the aims of the commission include preservation of agricultural land for farm use; encouraging the establishment and maintenance of family farms; greenbelt protection; preservation of land for residential or industrial development, and preservation of parkland for recreational use.

The land designated as agricultural, greenbelt, land bank or parkland reserves can include Crown land, although Stupich told reporters there will be "vast areas" of the province which the commission won't be interested in saving for farmland at this time.

The total area of farmland to be studied by the commission, he estimated, would be no more than about 3 per cent of the total land area of the province.

The commission may lease back to the former owner the farmland it buys if he wishes to farm it; develop and improve it for possible resale; or even farm it directly, Stupich said, adding: "The commission can make almost any kind of deal with the farmer."

There is also provision in the legislation for tax incentives to encourage the dedication of privately-owned farmland to permanent farm use, and to increase the land's agricultural productivity.

In cases where commission lands are unoccupied, or the lease does not provide for tax payments by the lessee the commission is empowered to pay the municipality or regional district a grant in lieu of taxes.

Stupich pointed out that in some cases the commission could help farmers by selling them the land they need to "round out" their properties.

One of the most contentious sections of the bill apears to be the one that states: "Land shall be deemed not to be taken or injuriously affected by the reason of the designation by the commission of that land as an agricultural land reserve, greenbelt land reserve, land bank land reserve or parkland reserve."

Tackled on this point at the press conference, Stupich said there is no question of compensation involved because to have transfer of ownership there must be a seller and a buyer.

"The commission is undertaking to be the purchaser if the farmer comes to the commission first," he said. After that it will be a case of negotiating with the particular farmer.

Stupich said the commission would study market values in the particular community and "arrive at a price that is fair."

Asked if the policy is giving B.C. farmers cause for complaint, particularly those who might be nearing retirement age and hoping to sell land that is not viable as farmland, Stupich said: "People who have been sitting on land hoping they might be able to persuade the municipal council their farmland should be rezoned for residential or industrial use — they might be aggrieved."

He said most of the land that will be affected is already zoned, if not used, as, agricultural, and the government doesn't agree that there will be any detrimental effect on land values as a result of the legislation.

Stupich said the legislation will not be referred to the legislature's standing committee on agriculture for detailed consideration at this session.

But he hopes the committee will have a part to play between the end of this session and the fall session, in helping to sound out public reaction to the legislation and evaluate what it has accomplished.

The community will be invited to make representations to the government during the spring and summer, and these will be considered in deciding whether any changes to the legislation are required later, he said.

Stupich said no cabinet minister or MLA will serve on the commission. He said it will be desirable from the public point of view to have "someone with some stature in the agricultural community," although not necessarily a farmer, as chairman.

Land Control Angers Critics

A wave of angry reaction from the three opposition parties in the legislature greeted the introduction Thursday of the NDP government's legislation setting up a Provincial Land Commission to control land use in B.C. under four specific designations.

Some of the main opposition charges were that the legislation removes the individual's right to land ownership denies any compensation resulting from lowered land values and cuts across the jurisdictional rights of local authorities.

In a prepared statement, Social Credit house leader Frank Richter said private ownership in the province is "destroyed" because the commission will be able to designate "every square inch" of B.C. under the four categories reserving land for agricultural, greenbelt, land bank and parkland purposes.

Compensation is denied for monetary injury suffered as a result of the designation, and the jurisdiction over land now held by municipalities and regional districts is transferred to a five-man commission not directly responsible to the legislature, he said.

As prices are determined solely at the discreation of the commission, any protection that now exists under the province's expropriation laws "has gone into oblivion."

Richter said the provision that an appeal can be made only on a question of law or that the commission has exceeded its jurisdiction effectively means there is no appeal.

Calling the bill "vicious," Don Phillips (SC-South Peace River) said it appears to give the land commission "complete dictatorial powers to take land from anyone without compensation" by any means it considers necessary.

Conservative house leader and Oak Bay MLA Scott Wallace claimed the legislation spells "disaster to individual rights" and "clobbers" the landowner.

His Conservative colleague, Hugh Curtis (Saanich and the Islands) said the bill "may well prove to be the Bill 33 of the NDP government" — a reference to the much-criticized compulsory arbitrations aspects of the labor legislation passed by the former Social Credit government and since repealed by the NDP.

"This is easily the most sweeping piece of legislation with respect to land control which one could have expected to see. It is bureaucratic and faceless in its concept because it says the commission is supreme," Curtis said.

"It neutralizes municipalities and regional districts in the planning function and it makes no provision for local input."

Liberal spokesman on agricultural matters, Allan Williams (West Vancouver-Howe Sound) said it was the "most momentous" piece of legislation to come before the house in many years, far exceeding in impact the bill brought in last week which deals with government-run car insurance.

He predicted it will be some time before the full significance of the powers granted the commission is generally understood. The initial impression is, however, that the commission will have autocratic authority in dealing with a variety of land uses, and therefore takes away the jurisdiction over land now enjoyed by levels of local government.

North and South Saanich Farmers' Institute held a stormy meeting two weeks ago and sent in a 160-name petition suggesting an alternative method of protecting farmland.

President Bill Taylor commented today: "The government has paid no heed. They seem pretty determined about this."

The petition asked for future sales of farmland to proceed unencumbered unless land was to be converted to non-farming use. It also suggested legislation giving the government first refusal to purchase for market prices land to be held for non-farm use.

The B.C. Federation of Agriculture circulated a similar petition and local farmers received support for their stand from Sidney and North Saanich Chamber of Commerce.

WOOD EXPORT BAN URGED

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senator Robert Packwood will ask Congress next week to enact legislation that would ban all exports of timber from the United States by Jan. 1, 1977.

Exports to Japan — nearly three million board feet in 1972 from Washington, Oregon and California — are "creating a severe domestic shortage of softwood lumber and plywood," Packwood says in his proposed bill.

Pipeline Blast

SPARWOOD (CP) — A bulldozer apparently ripped into a natural gas pipeline late Thursday, causing an explosion. No injuries were reported.

Winners Doped

CHICAGO (AP) — More than half of the winning horses at Illinois racetracks had been given illegal drugs last year, says chairman Anthony Scariano of the Illinois Racing Board. While this could indicate the races were fixed, Scariano said prosecution is difficult.

the weather

A weather system out in the Pacific is forecast to bring increasing cloudiness along with a few rainshowers or periods of rain to southwestern B.C. early Saturday. This cloud will spread eastwards reaching the Kootenay district by Saturday evening. Elsewhere skies will be generallly sunny except for a few cloudy periods mostly in the morning. Temperatures across the province will remain mild.

Libel Trial Over, Decision Reserved

The last words were spoken Thursday as the 8½-day Pound-Scott Libel trial ended in B.C. Supreme Court.

Mr. Justice R. A. Wootton, in reserving decision on the issues of libel and damages, said "I will reflect a reasonably long time" before making judgment.

As the case closed, Dr. Brian Pound's lawyer, Cecil Merritt, said the defendant's plea of justification contributed to the length of the trial, placing the plaintiff under greater strain, "but anything less than a substantial sum (damages) would give to the newspaper a licence to libel."

Louis Lindholm, representing Times colomnist Jack Scott and Victoria Press Limited, said he took "strenuous objection" to the remark. "It is the responsibility of the press to make criticism when it is required. And this is one of those cases where it is appropriate."

In his libel action, Pound is seeking unspecified damages from Scott and Victoria Press and, for further reproduction and distribution of an Aug. 13, 1971, column, Baker, Lovick BBDO Limited, company vice-president R. C. Kenmuir and Western Direct Mail Services Limited.

Pound claimed the column held him up to ridicule and contempt. The defendants denied this.

Lindholm told the court Thursday it was "incredible" and "almost inconceivable" that Pound could have been unaware of trends in British medicine which Scott dealt with in his column.

He said that either Pound didn't know or he didn't tell Times reporter Don Vipond in an interview published Aug. 10, 1971, of efforts to widen the scope of the general practitioner in the United Kingdom, which Scott commented on.

R. H. Guile, representing the other defendants, said Pound has not been subject to ridicule and there was no allegation of financial loss.

If there were to be any damages, he said, they would only be of "a nominal amount."

He said his clients were the "innocent disseminators" of information.

Dealing with the issue of fair comment, Guile said "this doctor injected himself into the public arena and utilized the language of the public arena and cannot be heard to complain he got it back in the same way."

He said Pound came to the newspaper and knew he was entering a controversy "and there can be no doubt that's what he got — a strong reaction. He stepped into the matter and he got what he expected and what he should have got."

Merritt told the court he was surprised the defendants pleaded qualified privilege, saying it was not a privileged occasion.

INDIRECT MOTIVE

He said there was "indirect motive that the law finds to be express 'malice'" because Scott's column didn't refer to any public issue and did not mention the matter which caused Pound to come to the newspaper in the first place.

It was a personal attack on the veracity and personal character of Pound as a doctor, he said.

Merritt said the malice of one, if that is found, "destroys it for all defendants."

He said a "personal attack" such as Scott's column cannot be considered a proper reply to someone who puts himself or his views before the public.

The inaccuracies complained of in Pound's Aug. 10, 1971, interview were "immaterial and irrelevant" to the case. To attack Pound on the interview article "does not go towards justifying" Scott's column.

He also said that Pound's comments in the interview, "while it may contain some inaccuracies, is not so very far off the case as to the evidence of the GPs situation in 1970 and 1972."

While the blueprint for wider use of diagnositic facilities by GPs had been drawn, it had not been achieved "even in 1970 and 1972" and one of the defendant's witnesses, a British medical expert, agreed that a lot of this access "may be governed by the attitude of the conultant in the hospital."

All three lawyers made frequent use of legal precedents in their summations.

RESIDENTS DEAF TO SCREAMS

Times News Services

BELFAST — A group of men lashed a screaming woman to a lamp post in a Protestant area of Belfast early today and savagely beat her as area residents watched silently from their windows.

Police said the woman, identified only as "young," was left hanging on the lamp post for more than an hour in freezing weather before anyone came to her aid. Her screams, police said, were heard several blocks away.

But "not a single person living on the street said they heard anything when we questioned them," a policeman said.

By the time police found her, the woman was reported in deep shock and unable to say anything about the attack. She was taken to a hospital for treatment.

It was the latest in a series of attacks police blame on fanatics involved in the 3½ years of political and religious violence that has killed 729 persons.

Today a British soldier was seriously injured when a bomb was hurled into his Londonderry sentry post and exploded as he tried desperately to throw it away.

An army spokesman said the bomb went off just as the soldier, identified as guardsman Michael Leary, reached down and picked it up. It was a beer can containing two or three sticks of explosives known as gelignite.

Doctors later amputated part of Leary's right hand and said that he also may lose his eyesight.

Earlier a top-ranking Irish Republican Army guerrilla broke out of the Crumlin Road jail in his second spectacular escape from British custody in Northern Ireland in 13 months.

Security forces said James Bryson, 24, an officer in the IRA's nationalist provisional wing, overpowered wardens escorting prisoners through an underground tunnel linking the jail and a city court.

He donned a warden's uniform, seized the man's service pistol and forced his way through the tunnel and out of the courthouse.

CARS FORCED UNDER BY ZONING CHANGE

New four-storey frame apartment buildings now have to provide at least half of their car parking underground, following a revision of zoning rules by city council Thursday.

At least 45 per cent of the apartment site must be landscaped — up from 30 per cent under former rules.

City Rezoning Method Rapped

City council tabled a proposal to make residential and commercial land use non-conforming west of Government between James Bay and Bay Street after a lawyer had blasted the city's revision procedures at a public hearing Thursday.

David Lisson, for Victoria Box and Paper, said the city had publicized the "drastic revisions" with two newspaper advertisements which were formal notices worded in "highly legal manner".

"There should be better efforts to make the public aware of what is happening," Lisson said. "The legal notices do not really describe the purpose of the bylaw."

He said the proposed bylaw would actually delete stores, restaurants and theatres from an area which included Old Town.

"This seems to be working in an opposite direction to the city hopes and planning for rejuvenation of Old Town," Lisson said.

He said many owners in the affected area were not aware of the proposed change when he contacted them shortly before Thursday's public hearing.

He added that to understand the legal notices it was necessary to have a copy of the bylaw and visit city hall to view the wording of the proposed change. Even then a copy of the proposed change could not be taken away for study, he said.

"As far as we can determine, this proposed change will virtually stymie plans for development of Old Town. If the rebuttal is that there is some proposal to come which will replace this deletion, then we should see that at the same time."

Sidney Biggs of Buckerfields said all retail establishments would become "arbitrarily dependent on the political climate" once they were non-conforming uses. Business would become a "nebulous guessing game."

The Fire Spreads

A tragedy on the scale of the Libyan passenger plane shot down by Israeli fighter planes with a loss of more than 100 lives was perhaps inevitable. The Israelis and Arabs cannot play around with lethal weapons in dangerous situations without an occasional slip to shock the world.

The Munich killing of Israeli athletes as the result of an Arab kidnap attempt was a desperate effort that went wrong. Any one of last year's Arab hijackings of airliners filled with passengers could have ended in a tragedy similar to that of Wednesday. The Arab massacre in an Israeli airport was deliberate rather than arising from a slip-up in terrorism. And Israel must accept full blame for downing the Libyan jet whether it was deliberately planned — which is unlikely — or the result of a bungled effort to force the French pilot to land his aircraft after flying — apparently in error — over Israeli military territory.

If the latest act brings Arab attempts at revenge, this will only add further wrongs to a situation already hopelessly mired in wrongs. It will be an added misfortune if the Israeli act inspires traditional anti-Jewish sentiment in other parts of the world among persons notably prone to use such opportunities.

But of major concern to the world will be the fact that this week's terrible incident will douse for a long time the few sparks of hope for peaceful negotiation that had begun to flicker here and there. The Middle East situation has been set back deplorably; the fears of open Arab-Israeli warfare — with all that this could imply regarding world peace — are renewed today.

With innocent persons of countries far from the Arab-Israeli quarrel now being involved willy-nilly as the victims of hijacking or military attack by both sides, the need for firm international action to dampen the Middle East fires is more obvious than ever. The United Nations, the major powers who dabble on the edges of the conflict, the world as a whole, have been shamefully backward — even reluctant — in coping with the threatening Middle East time bomb.

Now, surely the urgency is obvious, the need to protect non-participants tragically demonstrated.

It is too late to tot up the score of atrocities and try to determine which side emerges the cleaner. Neither is clean. Only the hopes of the major powers to profit in one way or another by the dangerous situation in the Middle East prevent them from combining now to order and enforce a halt by both sides — and by the guerrillas too. How long must the wound fester before first aid is applied?

Apathy?

Greater Victoria School District's demoralizingly low voter turnout to pass, by the slimmest of margins, the capital expenditure referendum last Saturday, is justifiably viewed as due to monumental apathy. Approximately one qualified voter in eight marked a ballot for the $1.6 million program, and the required 60 per cent favoring the plan was exceeded by less than two dozen votes.

But a factor other than apathy might have influenced the balloting. Many persons were disenchanted by the maintenance workers' strike which inflicted semi-paralysis on the schools, so closely following the teachers' annual salary wrangle.

Since the very low-keyed propaganda for the referendum placed major emphasis on the need for safety factors in existing facilities, a large number of voters, in good conscience, could not vote no. They could, however, abstain from voting in a display of disapproval. Apathy was definitely displayed. But the authorities might well consider the possibility that some abstentions represented a form of protest.

Funds for French

Education Minister Dailly claims her Social Credit predecessors funnelled into provincial general revenue the federal grants given for special encouragement of school pupils to learn French. Now, she says, the annual grant — as much as $700,000 — will go to a variety of projects designed to make learning French more attractive and easy.

Money alone will not convert awkward students of French into fluent scholars. But British Columbia school pupils will have a better chance of gaining some fluency if they are exposed to French at an early age rather than in later years. At any rate, it's worth a try. Bilingualism could become a pleasant accomplishment instead of a too-soon forgotten chore.

DAVID HUMPHREYS

The Supplement Will Name It

OXFORD, England — Robert W. Burchfield, chief editor of the Oxford English Dictionaries, wanted to know the meaning of the Canadian term, "housekeeping cabins." Or were they merely an advertiser's gimmick?

"You've never heard of them and I've never heard of them," he said, "but they exist." He produced the evidence, an advertisement from a 1970 copy of the Globe and Mail. "Fine — we must look now and find out."

This scene in the upstairs room of a terraced house may have been the birth of a new Canadian word. From here Mr. Burchfield directs his staff of 20 preparing the second volume, G to P, of the new Supplement to the Oxford English Dictionary. The first volume, A to G, published last October, contains about 50 Canadian terms among its 18,000 new listings.

Canadian Content

Mr. Burchfield said Canada would be more generously treated in volumes two and three, to be published in 1975 and 1977, because research documents more authentic terms. Most Canadian reading is being done under contract by Victoria freelance writer Dr. Douglas Leechman.

Mr. Burchfield also turns to Prof. Walter S. Avis, chief editor of A Dictionary of Canadianisms, as an authority. "If Leechman and Avis approve, 'housekeeping cabins' it will get in volume two," he said.

He was writing to them for reaction. As a provisional definition he suggested: "A holiday cabin or chalet in which the occupants are expected to do their own housekeeping."

Dr. Leechman is one of about six paid readers around the English-speaking world who read systematically and regularly for Oxford. His reading of early Canadian books and Victoria papers for different periods in their history had already provided the staff with "a very long and leisurely look at Canadian vocabulary." Dr. Leechman had covered Newfoundland recently (one of the more interesting provinces) and was working his way from East to West.

The Supplement has no intention of competing with the Dictionary of Canadianisms but aims to include all nationally-based words and a selection from the regions.

Canadian usage is bound to reflect the current political consensus, Mr. Burchfield said. As long as there was a strong feeling for a national identity separate from the United States, barriers would be raised against a complete surrender to American usage, though for many words even in Britain it was silly to try and advance different terminology.

"In our observations there is a deep feeling that Canada should be independent linguistically and in a very large area this has been achieved."

To the five definitions in the dictionary for beverage the Supplement adds a sixth: "As beverage room, in Canada, a bar-room in which beer is served." It traces written usage to 1936 in Blasted Pine by F. R. Scott and A. J. M. Smith.

Caboose, as "a mobile hut or bunk house moved on wheels or runners," has a 1912 vintage.

Bicultural is included without Canadian attribution although the first and last of five examples cited are Canadian. They are hardly likely to contribute anything to national confidence. The first reference by C. F. Ware in 1940 refers to "the bicultural tradition of Quebec." The last from The Times of London in 1963 with a national context says, "in fact this bilingualism and biculturalism do not exist."

On publication the Supplement sprang to attention for recording the taboo words for the first time and the two most obvious between A and G are in volume one.

"They stick out simply because they are there for the first time," Mr. Burchfield said. "They should have been in 75 or 100 years ago, but the climate of opinion wouldn't allow it." He believes the Supplement has a duty now to set the record straight. Reaction so far has been exclusively favorable.

"The function of a lexicographer is to record established usages — whatever his personal feelings. We are not moral censors or political censors, and generally not grammatical or etymological censors."

Not surprisingly, then, "escalate," "finalize" and "contact," (meaning to get in touch with), are all listed and analyzed.

Acid in the drug context is absent, Mr. Burchfield insists, only because it wasn't current in 1965 when the letter A was completed.

Time is one of the most common characteristics and hazards surrounding lexicography. The Supplement began in 1957 with a staff of four or five and when finished in 1977 will have taken twice as long as originally planned and will be twice as lengthy. The new Supplement will replace the 1933 version, which will be withdrawn.

Usage

Another closely related problem arises from a modern dictionary's very currency. "You are not the monarch of all you survey — the office girl can challenge you on usage." Mr. Burchfield illustrates with the recollection of a conversation with a female staffer who wanted to define bikini as a scanty swim suit. At first he held out for bathing costume then realized that more common usage in Britain at the time might well be swim suit.

It helps also to be in the most advanced centres of the English speaking world which might be Washington but certainly isn't Oxford.

What Oxford has is the Bodleian Library, one of the world's greats, where the staff often meticulously trace usage of words back through the centuries. Staffs are maintained also in Washington and London with their vast libraries. More than 1,750,000 quotations for word usage have been compiled and others are listed at the rate of 60,000 a year.

Unsolicited help, some of it quite useful, has been pouring in through the mail since publication alerted an unsuspecting world to the work in progress in the house on Oxford's Walton Crescent.

LETTERS FROM OUR READERS

Traffic

All this talk of malls to beautify the city is fine — also one-way streets to help the traffic flow. But what about the incapacitated person, including those who suffer from old age, sickness, etc.? To me, two blocks is tiring to walk. I have to shop in town, if I do any, as the shopping malls are beyond me — too much walking, even from the bus to the stores. I wish all the planners would consider this matter as it means much to me and many like me. Pedestrians are traffic, too. — "Getting Old and Dilapidated."

Ownership

My parents have drawn to my attention a letter which recently appeared in your newspaper. Written by one Len Klinger, of Vernon, president of an interest group called the B.C. Landowners' Association, it states an extreme view of the rights supposedly conferred by land ownership.

A man's home may be his castle, but the principle, asserted by Mr. Klinger, "that no one shall interfere with his fundamental right to enjoy, develop, bequeath or dispose of his land" has nothing to do with Canadian democracy. Insofar as that principle still persists, as it may in some of the country's unorganized areas, it is an unhappy residue of more primitive days.

No one has a "fundamental right" to create a nuisance for his neighbors, not even if he owns a piece of land. No one should have a right to develop land in such a way as to, in effect, defraud those who buy from him. An example would be to sell houses on badly-drained land where no sewers are available. The very idea of zoning rests on the widely-accepted premise that no one has the right to do with his land as he pleases.

Mr. Klinger has raised questions concerning the future of farming and farmland that the British Columbia government should and no doubt will deal with. To suggest that the answer to these questions is to allow farmers and other landowners simply to have their own way is unacceptable. That is the sort of answer that produces ecological disaster; that has produced, all over Canada, suburban and exurban sprawl of the worst kind.

Most British Columbians do not own land. Many of those who do surely have no wish to subscribe to the "do as you please" philosophy expressed by the B.C. Landowners' Association — Michael Horn, York University, Toronto.

Travel Aid

A proposal which I made recently to the Hon. M. Lalonde, minister of national health and welfare, has caused a good deal of comment and my purpose in writing this letter is to encourage further public discussion of the idea — which is that some public funds be used to enable old-age pensioners to travel.

The facts are these: Millions of dollars have been allocated for expenditure through the New Horizons program with the aim of stimulating senior citizen activities. The airlines are providing reductions in fares to senior citizens who travel at off-periods. The principle of utilizing federal funds for travel aid purposes is already in being with money spent to aid young people. And the secretary of state last year helped to bring a number of senior citizens from across the nation to Ottawa.

Putting together what interested older people could afford to pay, plus a share of the fare being met by New Horizons, and with off-season flight rates in effect, it seems to me that a senior citizen and his wife might travel home, i.e. to their homeland or home province, for, say, the price of one. There are older people who continue to reside in the province of their birth and, if interested, these people should be able to qualify also for a visit perhaps to their children.

I believe that it is commendable and feasible to assist older Canadians in this manner, Canadians whose lives in less fortunate times made possible the advantages of today's younger generation.

I urge interested people to write to the Hon. Mr. Lalonde asking favorable consideration.—Barry Mather, MP, Surrey-White Rock, B.C.

Only Cure?

The idea of ending the use of the strap in our schools spells disaster and I am sure our provincial minister of education will be very sorry indeed. We are taking away the only effective means the teacher has of controlling unruly children. There are many in elementary classes whose parents (so called) have never said "No" to their children, and who lived for the time when their little monsters could go to school. So unfortunately the teacher has to deal with the problem.

One undisciplined child can disrupt a class of 30 in addition to sending the teacher "up the wall" and to couple the word violence with discipline is absurd. A very affectionate pussy cat will give her sweet little kitten a swat if it gets out of line, so will a lionness with her young, but they are only animals and do not know any better?

The average boy (and I was one, years ago) is a monster, and I pray for the teacher who is expected not only to teach but to do the job that parents should have done since the child's fourth month of age.

Reactionary Position

I began writing a rebuttal to Bruce Hutchison's article "Change Our Ways — or Else," Victoria Times, Sat., February 17, particularly to the statement, "No revolution of such magnitude, both physical and mental, has ever been proposed before now in any society."

It is obvious he chose to ignore the objective of the Socialist Party of Canada and its companion parties spotted around the globe: "The establishment of a system of society based upon common ownership and democratic control of the means and instruments for producing and distributing wealth by and in the interest of society as a whole."

Upon further careful reading of the article I've found it fraught with erroneous statements and inferals. So much so, that a detailed rebuttal could fill a book to do it justice. The article simply isn't worthy of further written comment.

It is unfortunate that so little space is devoted to such topics in the media, even more disappointing that it is reserved for the confused editorial writers deemed worthy by the commercial press. While others who express in depth concern and knowledge of the subject are awarded only a reactionary position in the very limited token free-speech column designated "letters to the editor." — Wm. H. Johnson, 6332 Central Saanich Rd.

Oliver Twist

The Turner budget granting the Canadian pensioners an increase of $13.39 poses a very pertinent question for the next election day.

Will the Canadian voters feel justified in all clear conscience in continuing this below-the-poverty-line treatment for many Canadian pensioners?

And I am not talking about the affluent pensioners.

February 10 a front page news story read:— "OTTAWA — A $125 monthly basic Old Age Pension — more than a 50 per cent boost over the existing payment — has been mentioned by federal welfare department officials to their counterparts in at least one province. $125 was the figure proposed by Welfare Minister Marc Lalonde to the federal cabinet."

That was good news for all pensioners, their spirits rose — at least they thought they were getting a substantial increase. The welfare minister had used the term "substantial" several times. Then the day of days arrived. The cold hard facts and figures confirmed a pittance increase of $13.39. Further words fail me. Is it not time for all Canadians to speak up? — Otto Nordling, North Vancouver, B.C.

60 YEARS AGO

From The Times of Feb. 23, 1913

MEXICO CITY — Francisco I. Madero and Jose Pino Suarez were killed about midnight when they were being taken in an automobile under guard from the national palace to the penitentiary. The circumstances surrounding the death of the deposed president and vice-president of Mexico are unknown, except as given in official accounts, which do not conform in all cases. The only witnesses were those actually concerned. Provisional president Huerta says the killing of the two men was incidental to a fight between their guard and a party attempting to liberate them.

School Discipline

It certainly is too bad that Mrs. Dailly, in her five months as education minister has seen fit to remove the last form of discipline in our schools. Perhaps she has listened to the "do-gooders and no-gooders" too quickly.

How many school boards, teachers, and parents did she poll before taking it upon herself to make this momentous decision?

In her talk in the Legislature, she calls it violence in our schools. Under those circumstances perhaps she would like to see the discipline, with the strap, removed from our homes. With the partial ban on the strap that has been in force these past few years, respect, lack of discipline, destruction of public or private property has seemingly increased.

Mrs. Dailly has been too far removed from the school rooms to have first-hand knowledge of the situation.

What makes the matter worse is that Mrs. Dailly in her new-found position feels that it is more important to teach about the "birds and bees" (something that comes naturally!!) than to teach discipline!!

In my opinion, as a parent, when we remove the board of education from the seat of learning, we are in real trouble. —Tom Gaffney, 3937 Peter's Rd.

Sometimes You've Got to Say No to Your Boss

People who won't say no become ill, age prematurely and could under certain circumstances develop a physical handicap, according to Rudiger Ullrich, 32, and his wife Rita Ullrich de Muynck, 28.

The Ullrichs, both psychologists, analysed the spreading mental inhibition against rejecting demands imposed by the world around. They believe that this disorder is a result of contemporary civilization, a misguided form of social conduct that is learned by or drummed into a person.

The two researchers examined more than 140 patients with psychoses of this type over the past three years. The case of a 45-year-old civil servant whose mental sickness manifested itself in the form of serious organic symptoms is as crass as it is typical.

"E-d-u-a-r-d ..." His hand began to shake as he wrote the letter "u". "S-c-h-u ..." His fingers shaped into claws as if formed by some invisible force. His whole arm shivered. Bathed in sweat, Eduard Schuster allowed his pencil to drop — he could no longer write his own name.

This terrible battle was the end of a career of penpushing. Looking more like an eighty-year-old as a result of premature aging, the man had undergone a number of courses of hospital treatment before coming to the behavioural therapists at the Max Planck Institute for Psychiatry in Munich.

"Are you a civil servant?" Dr. Ullrich asked. "Yessssir!" came the reply like a shot from a gun. Schuster leaned forward as he spoke and smiled amiably at the two psychologists.

"Are you widowed or divorced?" He considered. "Well, actually I'm married. Have I filled in the form wrong? Sorry, that was stupid of me."

The civil servant had indeed stated he was married on the form. He had an extremely pleasant wife and five children and lived in a modest home on the outskirts of a city in the west.

The psychologists knew most of the details from their files but they wanted the man to talk with them. Three hours later they knew Eduard Schuster's whole life story.

He was born in 1927, was of medium build and average intelligence and was proud of his neat and careful handwriting.

Whenever there was a training course, Schuster would pass it with flying colors. Whenever there was overtime to be done, his boss always found him willing. "With pleasure," was his answer, even if he had not been asked.

"Schuster, could you work through these files before nine o'clock tomorrow morning?" "Certainly," he would eagerly reply, even to such a presumptuous demand as this, and would often sit at his desk before the break of dawn.

Whether he was serving in the armed forces during the war or later working in the public service, he could never say no to anyone. He smiled and did as he was asked.

By VOLKER MYSLIWIEC

He started having trouble with his heart at the age of 33. He suffered from insomnia, was ordered to take a rest, wandered from specialist to specialist, took another rest from work, swallowed tablets and sleeping pills and was given injections. His neat handwriting grew shaky.

"The increasing inability to refuse things drives more and more people into a state of strain which threatens their health," Dr. Ullrich states. "They often suffer neurotic disorders without realising they have passed their point of maximum endurance."

Though promotion was due at 37, Schuster's application was rejected. Cramp and paralysis were the result. He started to age prematurely. At the age of 45 he was unable to sign his own name.

"Even when demands are extreme, an unbroken will to accomplish will make any climbdown appear like failure," Rita Ullrich de Muynck explains. "The fear of failure however usually spurs a person to accomplish greater things. In this way complaints such as writer's cramp could get out of hand."

With eyes big and friendly, hat in hand and as eager as ever, Schuster eventually attended the most important training course in his life as an invalid in the Max Planck Institute in Munich. He learned to say no.

"Writer's cramps are, we find, the result of mental disorders," the two behavioural therapists reveal. "An incorrect form of conduct like the inability to refuse is usually drummed into a person over a number of years by influences in the world around him. Our therapy therefore rests on helping him unlearn this."

The first thing the socially-disturbed patient practises is to ask for something in his own right. Acting in a group of fellow-sufferers, Schuster was made to ask a passenger in a tram to give up his seat for him. His request would be granted or rejected according to the system worked out by the therapists.

"The patient can always get his demands accepted in this fixed-answer game," Ullrich explains. "Afterwards the roles are switched. Patients also learn to refuse requests."

These scenes are video-recorded and patients can observe their behavior when the tapes are replayed. Homework consists of trying to employ what has been learned.

Schuster plucked up more and more courage as he found that he could get his own way — whether at play or in real life. He went to the income tax department and insisted that they explain something to him. He rehearsed how to ask for a raise and not take no for an answer.

"As self-confidence grows, patients lose their fear of failure," the Ullrichs claimed. "They learn to accept occasional disappointments as something quite natural. This gives them the strength to refuse something off their own bat and say no."

Women patients with social disorders of this type were made to act out 110 situations with a generally increasing degree of difficulty. The Ullrichs gave this method the name assertive training program.

"Once lost, the ability to write must be re-learned," they claim. "At first patients simply draw circles. Later, they learn to sign their name in the presence of friends and then in public, perhaps at a post office."

Schuster passed this course with flying colors as usual. Two months later he was refusing to do anything that did not fit in with his plans. His handwriting was once more clear and precise. He returned to his job and was promoted soon afterwards.

Eduard Schuster could easily have been called Willi Lehmann or Franz Huber. His name has been changed anyway. But the story is true.

There's Still War On For President Thieu

By THOMAS W. LIPPMAN
The Washington Post

SAIGON — President Nguyen van Thieu is continuing to run South Vietnam almost as if the Paris peace agreement had never been signed, with the army and the police as his principal instruments of statecraft.

Despite blunt warnings from some of his own advisers, from his non-communist opposition and from the U.S. mission that it is time to strike out on some new paths, there have been no significant changes in his rigid domestic policies or his unyielding attitude toward the Viet Cong's Provisional Revolutionary Government.

In the words of one of his own government officials, "Thieu has not yet made the fundamental decision to change from war to peace."

Playing for Time?

Not even the president's severest critics are suggesting that at this early stage of the cease-fire, when the fighting is still going on, the government should relax as if all issues had been settled.

But Thieu is being told by western officials and by Vietnamese leaders of all shades of political opinion that he will have to shift his basic approach from belligerency to conciliation because of international pressures and economic realities.

Most of those interviewed last week say they believe the president knows that and is only playing for time.

In the meantime, however, Thieu has made clear in a variety of ways that he will yield nothing he does not have to yield to the PRG, that he will continue to demand political reliability from government workers and that he is not going to appoint anyone of questionable orthodoxy to positions of power or influence.

Lt. Gen. Ngo Dzu was dismissed as Saigon's chief delegate to the four-party Joint Military Commission, according to well informed Vietnamese sources, because he showed himself too willing to follow the lead of the U.S. in making concessions to the communists on important points.

Thieu has rebuffed suggestions from U.S. officials and from his own advisers that he begin demobilization of the armed forces and put the money saved to domestic uses that might strengthen his political image.

He has continued to purge low-level government officials in the countryside whose anti-communist zeal is found wanting. A recent example was a village chief in the Mekong Delta who, according to Vietnamese sources, was ousted for talking to Viet Cong officials who had occupied one hamlet in his village instead of calling for troops to chase them out.

The representatives of North Vietnam and the PRG who are in the country legally, as part of the military commission created by the Paris peace agreement, have been kept under virtual house arrest and away from all contact with the Vietnamese public.

Thieu is also reported to be delaying the start of political negotiations with the PRG in Saigon. Reliable sources say the PRG delegates who will be coming here are insisting that the conference be held in a downtown location visible to the public. Thieu is holding out for what the foreign ministry calls "a serene atmosphere without pressure from the people and from outside."

"What it amounts to is a real desire on Thieu's part not to give this impression that his former enemies are now comrades," an American diplomat said.

South Vietnam remains under martial law, with the army acting as police force, court system, propaganda agent and civil administrator down to the lowest levels of government. Although public demonstrations are banned, there have been several directed against the communist delegates to the Joint Regional Military Commissions, an outbreak that informed Vietnamese attribute to government sponsorship.

The press continues to be tightly controlled — the Vietnamese press is totally barred from printing any news about the activities of the communists — as is travel abroad. Movement to and from communist controlled areas of the country, though guaranteed by the Paris agreement, is prohibited.

In short, the country remains, as a prominent government official put it, "a garrison state."

American analysts, including some who are not admirers of Thieu, argue that the president has ample reason to keep the country on a war footing.

"There are 100,000 North Vietnamese soldiers in the country," one experienced U.S. embassy analyst said. "They control the borders. They're still bringing in men across the demilitarized zone. And the fighting is still going on. What else can he do?"

Long-Term Hatreds

"There's a historical continuum that you have to understand. Hatreds built up over generations cannot be buried overnight. Besides, the Vietnamese have come to realize that Vietnamization means more than just Vietnamese doing the dirty work. It means Vietnamese making the decisions, doing it their way, and their way happens to be the tough hard line way."

He said the deadlines specified in the Paris agreement for various military and political steps to end the war and establish a new political system were clearly unrealistic when they were agreed to,

THIEU . . . anti-communism to the end

"but they will force action soon. If there were no deadlines, nothing would happen."

"For Thieu it's anti-communism to the end," said a legislator who a month ago was part of the president's inner circle but whose loyalty seems to have cooled.

The widespread belief among Vietnamese and Western sources that Thieu will soon be forced to back off from some of his hard line policies and enter serious political discussions is based on several factors.

One of them is Article 14 of the Paris agreement, which says that "The acceptance of military aid by South Vietnam in the future shall come under the authority of the government set up after the general elections in South Vietnam."

This is viewed by some analysts as assuring that the countries participating in the international conference on Vietnam opening in Paris Feb. 26 will provide military aid to Vietnam only if they are assured that elections in which the PRG participate are actually going to take place.

The conference itself is viewed as a source of pressure on Thieu, since the preponderance of sentiment among the participating nations, Vietnamese sources believe, is in favor of a negotiated political settlement, not continuation of hostilities.

"You know, we are very conservative people," one influential Vietnamese source said. "We are used to war and we don't like changes, especially when they bring unknown results. But if we make the PRG feel that they have no chance to gain anything politically, they will return to force of arms. We don't want that, we can't afford that, and we know the U.S. will not support us if it happens. President Thieu has to come around because the alternatives are too unpleasant."

Billions for Arms

THE LUNACY OF NATIONS

THE PROGRESSIVE

Military spending continues to dominate the budgets of most nations, the U.S. Arms Control and Disarmament Agency (ACDA) stressed in its recent report, World Military Expenditures, which covered outlays for arms and warfare for the eleven years ending in 1971. The data in the report reinforce the basic findings of the United Nations' Statistical Yearbook, but it also throws some light on other aspects of the military lunacy of nations.

For example, in 1970 the 120 countries surveyed by ACDA spent a total of $207 billion for military purposes but only $168 billion for public education and only $80 billion for health care.

The military burden bore down most cruelly on the developing countries. In 1970, the report pointed out, with nearly three-fourths of the world's people and only one-sixth of the world's gross national product, the developing nations accounted for more than one-half of all men under arms on the face of the globe.

Meanwhile, the developing countries' portion of world spending for public education was only thirteen per cent and of world outlay for public health purposes, only seven per cent. But such was their order of priorities (with encouragement from the great powers, we note, although the ACDA report does not) that military outlays in the poor nations and the size of their armed forces rose "three or four times as fast" during the 1961-71 period, the ACDA reported, as in the developed countries.

In 1961, world military spending was $119 billion; in 1971 it was $216 billion, an increase of eighty-two per cent and the highest figure since the end of the Second World War. The United States, the report disclosed, accounts for more than one-third of the world's military outlay.

The 1970 U.S. defence figure was $78 billion compared to an estimated $65 billion spent by the Soviet Union, $10 billion by China, and $6 billion each by the United Kingdom, France, and West Germany. U.S. spending for military purposes in 1970 came to $379 for each of the nation's 205 million persons — nearly as much as the per capita outlay for public health and public education combined.

The ACDA as well as the UN figures on world military expenditures make tragically clear that too many nations and their leaders put more faith in swords than in plowshares, in force rather than reason. The one source of hope that the escalation of armaments can be at least partially checked is the multiplicity of negotiating conferences now being, or soon to be, held in all the strategic areas on earth.

Inflation Can Be Fun

RUSSELL BAKER

In his news conference the other evening, Secretary of the Treasury Schultz made devaluation of the dollar sound so good that you wondered why it took the U.S. government so long as they get around to it.

This talent for putting a happy gloss on events that seem only to portend misery to you and me is characteristic of men who deal with money as the stuff of high policy. These men have the happy knack of living always in the long run, financially speaking. The second notice from the credit manager, with its ominous warning that 18 per cent interest charges are already eating away at the foundations of your life, seems never to be delivered in the world these men inhabit.

Persons who deal in money policy have no patience with this. They think of it as whining and petty. Their minds are on the stars. One encounters them in Washington standing about crowded rooms marvelling at the good job the American government has done controlling inflation.

There was one such marveller the other night at a dinner party. A congenial, charming, but forceful man he was, who was happily impressed by the relatively lower (than Western Europe's or maybe Patagonia's) inflation rate in the United States.

It would have been suicidal to argue with him. One would have been overwhelmed in powerful statistics, made to feel limited and snivelling for taking the unhistorical personal view. To this man money was policy, and life was good.

During that night at the dairy store a $1.11 gallon of milk rose to $1.16. Such rises, like muggings, occur so frequently now that the papers don't bother reporting them anymore. In any event, why should they? What right have we to complain of a mere nickel rise in the price of milk when in far-away Bongu-Pungo the rate of inflation is triple that for the gross national American?

While the grocer is chipping away at the sum reserved for the auto-insurance collector, the jolly tax men keep up their Viking raids that leave pillaged plans and looted households behind them. Tax men are a special breed among the monetary happiness boys. Where the big policy-thinkers at the treasury tend to be philosophers of the school of Docter Pangloss, the tax boys are funning, happy-go-lucky flim-flam men.

That tax increase they began taking out of your paycheque in January? That was no tax increase, ma'am; that was the new social security deduction. You'll get that back one of these days.

One of these days. But what about next month's auto insurance payment? Before we could get an answer, the local real-estate-tax man interrupted. He had been re-assessing and had a brand new assessment increasing the taxable value of the property by 33 per cent. In short, the property tax has been raised by one-third.

The tax man was offended at this reading of events. Smirking as cunningly as a second-rate con man, he explained that that was no tax increase, that was just an attempt to keep order on the assessment books. But would taxes not go up one-third? A sly wink from the tax man . . .

The dialogue was interrupted by Secretary Schultz's disquisition of the long-run benefits of devaluation. We who live in the short run know what to expect. First, German cars and Japanese TV sets will go up. Then, with foreign competitive pressure eased, American producers will hike prices on American cars and TV sets.

There will be less money to pay for the auto insurance, which will have to go up again to cover the increased prices of cars.

The tax men will find several ingenious ways to pluck the goose with a smile, the philosophers of money will urge us to quit snivelling and enjoy life in the long run, and we will continue to be a nation where, despite all the talk of the long run, nobody lives to be 142 years old.

Alcan

Alcan Aluminum Ltd. recorded net income of $61.2 million or $1.78 a share in 1972, compared with $60.2 million or $1.75 the previous year.

Revenue in 1972 was $1.5 billion, up six per cent from $1.4 billion in 1971.

Fabricated shipments of aluminum increased 87,000 tons to a record 859,000 tons. Alcan withdrew from some market areas for primary ingots and shipments were down by 34,000 tons to 592,000 tons.

The company expressed concern about surplus world capacity of primary ingots and 1973 profits would be determined to a large extent by the prices obtained. There was some upward movement in the price at year's end, the company said.

The sales picture is very bright. Sales in 1972 were up 12 per cent over 1971, the company reported.

EARNINGS

TD Bank

Toronto Dominion Bank reports balance of revenue for the first quarter ended Jan. 31 of $21.8 million, an increase of four per cent over the corresponding period in the last fiscal year.

Chairman Allen Lambert says the outlook for the balance of the year is for earnings growth of 15 per cent.

Total assets of the bank at Jan. 31 were $7.7 billion. Canadian currency deposits were $4.8 billion, up 12 per cent from last year.

Total expenditures rose to $111.5 million from $94.4 million and provision for income tax was $10.2 million compared with $9.9 million a year ago.

C. Superior Oil

The net income of Canadian Superior Oil Ltd. decreased last year to $6.6 million. 78 cents a share, from $9.8 million or $1.15 a share in 1971.

The company said the decline came mostly from the provision of $6.3 million for current income taxes. Drilling expenditures during the year more than doubled to $7.7 million.

Gross revenue rose 10.3 per cent to $46.4 million; production of crude oil increased 8.5 per cent to an average of 35,117 barrels a day and sales of natural gas were up 12.4 per cent to 163 million cubic feet daily.

Neonex

Company president James Pattison announced 1972 earnings, before taxes, of $11 million for Neonex International Ltd., up from $9 million in 1971.

This resulted from sales of $225 million, up from $146 million the previous year. One-third of the total was in B.C.

Net earnings would not be known until the federal corporation tax changes were completed, he said.

Earnings per share were 40 cents in 1971, and estimates are for 48 cents in 1972, 54 cents in 1973 and a further 12 per cent increase in 1974.

Weston

George Weston Ltd. reports net operating income for 1972 of $18,577,000 or $1.61 a share, up 23 per cent from $15,113,000 and $1.29 in the previous year.

At extraordinary item of $11,340,000 from the sale of properties in Hull, Que., increased net income to $29,917,000 for the year, $2.65 on a per-share basis.

This compares with $16,785,000 and $1.45 after extraordinary items in 1971.

The company reports sales rose 10 per cent in 1972 to $1,137,232,000 from $1,036,578,000, reflecting increases in all divisions except forest products.

TAX TIPS

This information is supplied by the federal department of national revenue. If further details are required, contact the Victoria District Taxation Office between 8:30 a.m. and 4:30 p.m. at 388-3551. For those living outside the Victoria exchange area, ask the long-distance operator for Zenith 0-4000 and the call will be placed without charge.

Q. The expression, moving expenes, probably means many things to different people. Can you be specific regarding the types of moving expenses which can be deducted from income for income tax purposes?

A. Yes. Moving expenes would generally include the cost of travelling from a former to a new residence, including meals and lodging while en route, transportation and storage costs for household effects, and the cost of up to 15 days' temporary board and lodging near the former or new residence.

Q. What about the cost of cancelling a lease, advertising and legal costs, or real estate commissions. Are costs of this nature regarded as moving expenses?

A. Yes. Each of the items you mentioned included in moving expenses. We should probably mention that expenses for any work done to improve a property before sale, or mortgage penalty when the mortgage is paid off before maturity, or any loss incurred on a sale are not included in moving expenses.

Q. I have received a scholarship from a university which requires me to move to another city. I understand that the amount of the scholarship over $500 must be reported as income. Can I deduct my moving expenses to the university?

A. Yes. The amount of the scholarship over $500 must be declared as income and you may deduct moving expenses to the extent of such income declared in your return. Moving expenses include travel costs, meals and lodging while in route, transportation and storage costs of your household effects, temporary quarters, etc., for yourself and your family. Enquire at your district taxation office for a brochure on "moving expenses".

Q. I am a full-time university student and have obtained temporary employment some 200 miles away. I am required to pay my own travel expense to get to this temporary job. Can I deduct this expense from the income I earn during the summer?

A. Yes. If you have been in full-time attendance at a university or other post-secondary education institution in Canada, and you move to take a job, including summer employment, you may claim moving expense deductions. This applies only to moving expenses to get to the employment and not to those for your return to the university.

Mortgage Rates Continue to Decline

Interest rates on NHA-approved mortgages on apartments and townhouses were placed at 9 per cent or lower in February, down from a 9 to 9.25 per cent range in January. There was a large supply of funds at 9 per cent and some money available at less than 9 per cent for quality projects.

Interest rate on federally subsidized loans for low rental housing was down to 7⅝ from 7⅞ per cent.

For conventional mortgages on new and resold houses, mortgage rates continued in the 9 to 9.25 per cent range although almost all the activity was at 9 per cent.

Top interest rate for small commercial projects was down from 9⅝ to 9½. Top interest rate for small office buildings also slipped to 9½ from 9⅝. In both cases the new range is 9.25 per cent to 9.5 per cent.

Funds continued to be in excellent supply. Any easing of the downward trend in mortgage interest rates would depend upon the demand for funds for major construction projects.

BILL DROPS AGE OF CONSENT

Amendments to the Infants Act introduced Thursday in the legislature would allow any young person who has reached the age of 16 to receive surgical, medical, mental or dental treatement without the consent of his or her parent or guardian.

At present, such permission is required if the person concerned is below the age of 19.

However, the bill provides that the medical practitioner or dentist may give the young patient's parent or guardian "such information as the person treating the infant may consider advisable."

Barbed Confidence Motion Attacks NDP Citizen 'Neglect'

A double-barrelled motion of non-confidence in the government carried the legislature through five hours of debate Thursday with the subject continuing on the floor of the house this afternoon.

First to move non-confidence in the government was Liberal leader David Anderson, whose motion was subsequently amended by Don Phillips (SC-South Peace).

Anderson's amendment to the traditional motion that the speaker leave his chair — used to begin debate on the budget speech — was worded "that the budget neglects the general good of the citizens of the province by failing to provide for relief, from the burden of provincial taxation and by failing to provide adequate consumer protection."

Phillips' sub-amendment, seconded by Ed Smith (SC-North Peace), specified the problem as the "economic viability of the entire north-eastern section of the province, namely the Peace River-Liard region in particular, and for the purpose of restoring the level of job activity within British Columbia in general."

ONLY OPPOSITION

Only members of opposition parties spoke during the non-confidence debate Thursday afternoon and night. The house rose at 11 p.m. on an adjournment motion by Harvey Schroeder (SC-Chilliwack).

In moving the non-confidence motion, Anderson critized the government for not acting to alleviate the taxation burden on municipalities and individual homeowners.

He said municipalities are having to shoulder at least 15 per cent of provincial welfare costs and are facing a heavy tax increase this year.

School taxes have not been removed from property as the government promised, Anderson said.

Garde Gardom (L-Vancouver-Point Grey) seconded the non-confidence motion and urged the government to do more in the consumer protection field.

In moving the sub-amendment, Phillips called for vastly increased government help and encouragement for farmers, and said it's about time the government stopped treating them as a "necessary evil."

HEAVY LOSS

The financial loss to the province will run into the "multi-millions of dollars," he warned.

Pat McGeer — (L-Vancouver-Point Grey) said leases on oil operations in the Peace River area are being discontinued because of the government's actions. Between 5,000 and 6,000 people will end up out of work next winter if drilling rigs are shut down in the Peace, he said, adding that what is happening now is only "the start of the disease."

The NDP government does not understand "the real world," McGeer said, and the result has been an "economic mess" in the Peace River area.

Surrey Farmers Favored—Socred

Ed Smith (SC—North Peace) accused the government in the legislature Thursday of giving preferential treatment to farmers in Surrey who suffered crop damage over farmers with similar problems in the Peace River area.

Smith charged that Surrey farmers whose crops were damaged this year by flooding received an average of $277.44 per acre. By comparison, he said, farmers in the Peace River area received only $3.75 per acre, despite the fact that both provincial and federal governments contributed.

Smith said the money is available in the disaster relief fund to adequately compensate farmers anywhere whose crops are damaged. He added that some of the $24 million the province is saving on the mincome plan because of the federal budget could be used for this purpose.

He called the case an example of "tin cup treatment" for the Peace River farmers, who had suffered losses in the area of $15 million.

"You should hand your head in shame," Smith told Premier Dave Barrett. "It's obvious that this government that claims to care about people, cares for some more than for others."

Britannica Denies FTC Charges

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Encyclopedia Britannica Inc., of Chicago, Wednesday denied federal trade commission (FTC) charges that it used deceptive practices in recruiting salesmen and in selling books.

The firm, and its subsidiary, Britannica Home Library Services Inc., were accused last December of recruiting salesmen by advertising that jobs were available in public relations, management and other non-selling tasks.

The FTC said persons who applied for such jobs were recruited instead as door-to-door salesmen and did not receive the advertised monthly income of $500.

The firms, in today's response, denied the allegations and said the FTC charges were vague.

In addition to the allegation of deceptive recruiting, the firms were accused of using salesmen who claimed they were taking a survey but were really selling books; that certain books were not provided free in exchange for testimonials or referrals, as the salesmen claimed; and that the retail prices which the salesmen claimed were not really the regular sale prices, and the customer did not really save money.

Cost $20,540

Environmental studies of the proposal to locate a coal port at Squamish on Howe Sound have cost the government a total of $20,540.76, Premier Barrett disclosed Thursday.

Answering a question on the order paper, Barrett said the money was paid out to the firm of Howard Paish and Associates.

A further study of a second proposal to locate the port at Britannia, seven miles south of Squamish on Howe Sound, is in the process of being conducted by Paish. Cost of this study was not mentioned by Barrett.

MLA Warns of Coast 'Death Warrant'

Premier Barrett will "sign a death warrant for the B.C. coast" unless he comes up with answers to the questions he is sure to face from U.S. officials on the oil issue, Liberal leader David Anderson said in the legislature Thursday.

Anderson said that when Barrett goes to Washington, D.C., to represent the province's position on the American proposal to build a trans-Alaska pipeline and oil tanker route down B.C.'s coast, he will face an "uncomfortable" session with American officials.

Barrett will have to come up with answers other than the locally-political statements he has made so far on the issue, Anderson said. He added that unless there is a united front presented by the provincial and federal governments over the issue, an oil tanker route along the B.C. coast will be inevitable.

TOO LATE

Anderson said that Barrett has reversed his position on the oil question since his two trips to Washington State for discussions with Governor Dan Evans. Barrett's attempt to stop the pipeline and tanker route has come too late to be effective, he said, or to be of any use to the environmental groups which are opposing the American proposal.

After B.C.'s position is stated, Anderson told Barrett, there will have to be an answer to the American question: "What will you give us in return for us not shipping oil down your coast?"

B.C. will have to take a stand at that time on the proposal to build a pipeline down the Mackenzie Valley, he said, adding that he agrees with the federal government position on the issue.

NOT REQUIRED

This position is that 51 per cent Canadian ownership of the pipeline should not be a requirement for building the pipeline.

Anderson urged Barrett to go along with that position, but Barrett said across the floor of the house that he could not agree.

Attorney-General Alex Macdonald added that Anderson didn't know anything about "the real politics that goes on in Washington."

Anderson retorted: "When I need your advice on the real politics in Washington, I'll ask for it."

Barrett said Wednesday he will likely be going to Washington for discussions with U.S. government officials within 10 or 12 days. He has been attempting to arrange a meeting with U.S. Secretary of the Interior Rogers Morton, but Morton has been admitted to hospital for tests on cancer.

When Barrett said last week he would be trying to arrange a meeting, Anderson said it was a political trick designed to gain votes in B.C.

He added to the charge in the house Thursday, saying Barrett was "dragging a red herring" into the oil issue for his own personal gain.

Anderson said it is easy for Barrett to do so because "anything he says is news." But he added that Barrett's comments are "the type of device that will have to be abandoned if he really intends to take his job seriously."

LIQUOR PROFIT DRAWS FIRE

Garde Gardom (L—Vancouver Point Grey) said in the legislature Thursday that profits from government liquor sales in B.C. should be used for rehabilitative programs to a greater extent than they are now.

Gardom, speaking in the budget debate, said liquor profits have been increasing steadily over the years to the point where they are expected to top the $100 million this year.

At the same time, government financing of rehabilitative programs has remained constant at far too low a level, he said.

Gardom also urged the government to allow price competition on liquor products in B.C., particularly in respect to wines which could be imported from the California market.

And he said refrigeration is not an invention unknown to British Columbians, so why should a customer not be able to buy a case of cold beer at the liquor store.

Gardom also urged the government to put into effect some of the recommendations of the Morrow Commission on liquor reform.

Legislation To Name PNE Board

Resources Minister Bob Williams announced in the legislature Thursday that a new board of directors for the Pacific National Exhibition in Vancouver will be named through legislation to be introduced shortly.

Williams (NDP — Vancouver East) said the present 59-man board of PNE directors will be reduced to a 16-man board composed of representatives of all parts of the community.

The board will have five representatives from Vancouver city council, three from the area immediately surrounding the PNE grounds, one from the Vancouver parks board and one each from the following interest groups: agriculture, industry, business, culture or ethnic, artistic, sports and recreation and trade unions.

Williams said the argument flaring up between the PNE and the city council over use of ice facilities is only a continuation of the series of problems surrounding the PNE.

"We will have a truly representative body to govern the PNE. And we'll have an exhibition which will provide new heart for the east side of Vancouver," Williams said.

The legislation setting up the new board will be in the form of a new Pacific National Exhibition Corporation Act, he said.

CBC Radio Wins Awards

TORONTO (CP) — Three CBC radio programs have won awards for general audience programming in this year's Ohio State University broadcasting competition, the CBC said Thursday.

The competition, sponsored by the Institute for Education by Radio-Television, is the oldest of its kind.

Awards went to the CBC for Ch'i Lai Ch'i Lai: The Life and Times of Mao Tse-tung; Single Child, Aged Parent; both Toronto productions, and for Rejoice in the Lamb: the offering of Christopher Smart, a Vancouver production.

Radio programs produced jointly by the CBC and provincial departments of education in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and British Columbia and similar joint television productions in Manitoba and Saskatchewan won citations for educational programming.

The Ohio State University awards recognize meritorious achievements in educational, informational and public affairs broadcasting.

Holdup Attempt Fails: 'Bank' Was Library

BUFFALO, Okla. — The only explanation police have is that the two teen-age robbers must have got the bank mixed up with the library.

"It's the first attempted library robbery I ever heard of," policeman Ray Dawson said Thursday.

Dawson said the teen-agers held out an empty pillow case and told the library attendant, "put it in."

"Put what in?" the attedant asked.

The attendant, who said there was less than $1 in collected library fines in his petty cash box, ran out the door and escaped. The teenagers, believed to be runaways from Florida, were arrested hours later in Garden City, Kan.

ORMANDY
. . . A. China visit

PHILADELPHIA — Eugene Ormandy, conductor of the Philadelphia Orchestra, said he was in bed when President Nixon called him to say the orchestra had been invited to play in China.

"This may be the start of a cultural exchange program between the two countries," Ormandy said. The orchestra performed in Moscow in 1968, and Ormandy said he was "thrilled and delighted" at the new invitiation.

KHARTOUM — Princess Anne's two-day goodwill visit to Sudan got off to an embarrassing start. On its arrival Thursday night from Ethiopia, the princess's plane was flying the wrong Sudanese flag — a three-color one discarded after the revolution of May, 1969.

Investors Win Suit

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — State district court judge Melvin A. Shortess Thursday ordered Florida businessman Glenn W. Turner to pay 17 persons a total of $34,000 for their investments in Koscot Interplanetary, Inc., one of his numerous companies.

The judgments were entered against Turner; Koscot, his cosmetics firm; and Dare To Be Great, Inc., another Turner company.

The 17 had withdrawn from a federal court suit pending against Turner in Pennsylvania. Judge Shortess, who wished the plaintiffs luck in collecting the money, said the scheme's methods were doomed to failure.

No Break in 'Bonus'

By GEORGE OAKE
Times Staff

In an age of easy and practically unlimited credit some people end up owing their soul to the company store, incurring debts that will burden them for many years.

Earlier this week MLA David Brousson (L—North Vancouver-Capilano) complained in the legislature about lending practices among some mortgage companies.

A case in point, referred to Mary J. Whitehead of the Greater Victoria Savings Credit Union follows:

Desperately needing money, a Victoria woman approached Modern Finance, 229 Columbia Street, New Westminster in the hope of borrowing $4,200 to consolidate her debts. Modern Finance was willing to do business on the basis of a first mortgage on the woman's home.

An agreement dated Jan. 11, 1971, was drawn up between the woman and Modern Finance, assigning the mortgage to Jacston Securities, 430 Columbia Street, New Westminster.

The debt which the woman signed for was $6,000 rather than the $4,200 which she had borrowed.

Why?

Because some finance companies tack on a lump sum to the amount borrowed calling it a "bonus or discount".

It is all perfectly legal, and according to Miss Whitehead, gullible finance company customers often think the terms "bonus" or discount mean that they are getting some kind of financial break.

Not so. The finance company is getting all the breaks.

On top of the bonus the Victoria woman agreed to pay she was also saddled with a 21 per cent interest rate on the lump sum of $6,000, plus another $300 in legal fees.

The lady made her first payment of $110.77 on Feb. 15, 1971. To date she has paid back $2,058.48. After her Feb. 15 payment of this month — 24 months later — she still owes $6,004.

At $110 monthly payments a little more than $5 would be coming off the principal for a considerable time, says Miss Whitehead.

On welfare, and realizing she was in deep financial trouble, the lady sought once again to consolidate her debts. Unsolicited, she received an offer of help from United Mortgage Ltd., Suite 202, 895 Fort Street.

The letter, signed by V. R. Kruschel, said in part, "United Mortgages is engaged in placing mortgages regardless of credit rating or personal circumstances."

Instead, the lady was referred to the Greater Victoria Savings Credit Union by a social service agency.

Out of her $149 monthly welfare cheque the lady must pay $110 on her loan, leaving her with $39 to live on. The credit union is trying at present to get her total payment down to $60 a month.

At the current rate of repayment when will the lady be debt free — five years, 10 years?

"She won't be out of debt for a longer period than that," says Miss Whitehead.

SENIORS GIVEN GRANTS

Three senior citizens' groups in Greater Victoria have received grants worth a total of $18,635 under the federal government's New Horizons program.

The Senior Citizens' Campaign Council of Greater Victoria has been awarded $12,000 to expand services to sick and bed-ridden pensioners.

This group of volunteers — most are more than 70 years of age — visits and telephones shut-ins, provides sheets, blankets and dressing gowns for those unable to afford them and performs services such as letter writing, shopping and driving the elderly to treatment centres.

Members work closely with the Victorian Order of Nurses, Meals on Wheels, the Red Cross and other social agencies.

The Hampton Musical Entertainment Group of the Saanich Senior Citizens' Activity Centre has been awarded $5,500. The group includes an old-time band, a choir and a concert orchestra.

Band leader Frank Boon said the money will be used for transportation, instrument maintenance and music.

The group entertains senior citizens, shut-ins and hospital patients all over southern Vancouver Island.

A group of artists called the Victoria Pals of the Palette have received $1,135 to rent facilities in bad weather. Members are all senior citizens and some have suffered strokes or have other handicaps.

Mace Plans Vetoed; Court Battle Looms

By ROLAND MORGAN
Times Staff

The taxpayers of the city of Victoria appear headed for a $1 million court battle with real estate development promoter J. A. Mace, following a city council decision Thursday against a land-use contract for Mace's 29-storey Bay Village high-rise project.

Mace said today he does not acknowledge the validity of an emotion-packed public hearing attended by about 150 people which preceded council's four-four vote (a two-thirds majority was required to okay the contract).

He will proceed with his suit for damages against the city, and try to force the city to issue him a building permit to start excavations at the three-acre Simcoe and Menzies site.

Mayor Peter Pollen says he now wants: "Less density, purely and simply. Density reflecting the scale of the community. Certainly some open space — social, environmental, recreational considerations."

Mace, who claims he already has a land-use contract for the Bay Village project, although it has never been signed by Mayor Pollen, says his proposal is not too dense for the site.

"We worked with the city for over two years to reach this plan in 1970. We only waited until 1971 to seek the land-use contract because there was contract legislation under way in the legislature," he commented.

Thursday's public hearing received 22 letters, 18 protesting Bay Village shopping and apartment centre, and four in favor.

Eight speakers appeared, all protesting the project except one. Mace did not atttend the meeting.

The final vote went: In favor of a contract, Aldermen Percy Frampton, Alf Hood, Mike Young and Clyde Savage.

Against: Aldermen Sam Bawlf, Bill Tindall, Tom Christie (sole alderman to vote against the project in 1971) and Mayor Pollen. Ald. Ove Witt was away sick.

Many Suggestions

"I may say this gives me the greatest happiness since I've been mayor," Pollen told aldermen after they had made their swift decision towards the end of city business, 90 minutes after the crowds had left the council chamber.

Suggestions raised at the hearings ranged from mandatory publication of financial statements by companies making profits out of land development to increased emphasis on tall high-rise towers to concentrate housing and save open space.

Kay Lines, 27 South Turner, said: "We should know who exactly is investing money in these development projects." She said the city should enforce a profit rate equivalent to Canada Savings Bonds on land developers. Finances should be disclosed by law.

Maurice Johnson, solicitor on behalf of James Bay Community Association, said the city had not fully abided by the requirements of clause 702 (a) of the Municipal Act governing land-use contract applications.

Johnson said James Bay should be considered a satellite area of Victoria because of its limited access between Beacon Hill Park and the Causeway.

A spokesman for Menzies Street Merchants' Association said merchants were opposed to the introduction of a "large impersonal business monopoly."

Monte Vanton, 157 Barkley Terrace, Oak Bay, said "the syndrome of many high-rise developers is dog eat dog — there is no heart, there is no hope, there is no design."

Offers Cash

Vanton said a fund should be launched to fight the lawsuit Mace has started against the city. He pledged $100 towards the fund and called on others to donate anything from $1.

Mrs. H. C. L. Ransom, a resident of Lord and Lady Simcoe apartments overlooking the projected Bay Village site, said she could not understand what happened to the city when the Bay Village project was approved.

"Was it because a respected member of the advisory planning commission was the architect for the shopping centre?"

She said there was not enough time for presentations to be prepared for the 1971 public hearing on the Bay Village project. "Council voted in two minutes."

John Warren, 855 North Park, said new information showed that council's original decision was "inept" and council should not go forward.

Bill McKechnie, 634 Avalon, said Mace did not have a good case against the city. "He's suing, but for what?"

"He's going on a quasi-contract, something like a breach of promise. He will have to produce bona fide evidence of damage to the tune of $1 million. That figure is pure smoke-screen."

McKechnie said the city should try to negotiate with Mace for an alternative development.

Richard Talbot, manager of Anglo-Canadian Property Management Ltd., lone spokesman in favor of the project, said he favored tall, slender towers rather than "slabs".

Special Mill Rate Urged For Commercial Property

Victoria city council should plan a special reduced mill rate for commercial properties if the provincial government goes ahead with plans to remove the 10 per cent ceiling on commercial assessments, the Victoria Chamber of Commerce said today.

A statement prepared by chamber president Perry Farmer said commercial assessments could increase an average of 43 per cent in one year if the 10 per cent limit is removed.

Other municipalities would also have to have a contingency plan for special reduced mill rates on business to keep many of them from going bankrupt, he said.

The statement was released at a meeting of chamber directors at the Strathcona Hotel at noon today.

The chamber urged the provincial government to take a second look at plans to remove the 10 per cent ceiling.

Farmer's statement said:

"The inflationary aspect of this act is obvious but what is even more alarming is the number of small firms that will find that they cannot immediately increase their prices and in the interim they will find their working capital depleted by the payment of the increased tax.

"They could then be forced to liquidate their business or declare bankruptcy. The larger type stores will possibly find that they can absorb the increase in taxes until prices can be raised but the smaller independent firms cannot.

"The businessman is quickly discovering that new restrictions and levies such as the minimum wage, the increase in corporate taxes by the provincial government and now the increased property taxes are just going to be too much. The question has now been raised — is the provincial government out to get the small businessman?"

The chamber said if the provincial government does not reconsider the act, the City of Victoria and other municipalities should set up a contingency plan of a separate reduced mill rate for commercial properties in their area.

The chamber also expressed determination to carry on its campaign for a late night ferry between Vancouver and Victoria.

The chamber was strongly critical of Highway Minister Robert Strachan for cancelling plans for a late ferry crossing, especially in view of the election campaign promise by Esquimalt MLA James Gorst that the service would be provided by an NDP government.

The provincial government "should live up to its stated commitment and immediately fulfill the pressing needs of the Greater Victoria area," the chamber said.

QUERY SPARKS CLASH

Introduction of an unusual parliamentary procedure resulted in Mayor Peter Pollen being forced to curtail a line of questioning at Thursday's highly-charged Bay Village shopping centre public hearing.

The mayor interrupted property manager Richard Talbot as Talbot showed a picture of the Bay Village 29-storey tower and described the tower as resting on three acres of "ground."

"This is going to be on an immense concrete pad, not ground," the mayor interjected. "These wild statements some of you people make must be challenged by legitimate and conscientious people."

"You manage Westsea (sic) Developments at Fort and View — would you say that's an acceptable project?" the mayor asked, in an apparent attempt to show that Talbot had an interest in a "slab-type" apartment building of the type Talbot had condemned.

Ald. Mike Young, who later voted in favor of a Bay Village contract, leapt to his feet and demanded: "Is this the place for a cross-examination? Intimidation and inquisition are utterly inappropriate."

The mayor: "To suggest I am running an inquisition is suggestive of a torture chamber . . . I am chief magistrate of this city and I can be heard."

Young: "I feel inquiries into other properties is beyond the matter at hand."

The mayor called for a vote sustaining the chair — e.g. the mayor — and it was defeated.

Aldermen Mike Young, Alf Hood, Percy Frampton and Clyde Savage had effectively overruled the mayor in his line of questioning. All four aldermen subsequently voted in favor of a Bay Village contract.

Talbot explained that he managed only the shopping centre portion of a development which he referred to as Westpark.

"To suggest I have shown any bias is preposterous," the mayor remarked.

Perry Named By UVic

Dr. Neil Perry, B.C.'s deputy minister of education from 1965 to 1970, has been appointed director of the University of Victoria's new school of public administration.

The appointment is effective July 1.

Since 1970, Dr. Perry has been with the federal government in Ottawa where he served in a number of senior positions, including that of deputy minister of manpower and immigration, program development service.

Currently, he is special adviser to the deputy minister on education and labor market relationships.

Gunman Routed

A 20-year-old man who was struck on the head with his own gun by the shopkeeper he tried to rob today pleaded guilty to attempted armed robbery.

James Michael Smith, of no fixed address, was remanded for sentence later today in provincial court by Judge William Ostler.

Smith walked into a small grocery store at 1608 Camosun around 8:30 p.m. Thursday, after apparently casing the shop earlier in the day.

After asking the storekeeper for a package of cigarettes, he pulled a .22 air pistol from a holster at his waist and told the woman:

"This is a holdup, Mrs. Graham."

When Mrs. Vera Graham, the storekeeper, refused to hand over the contents of the till, some $50 to $60, Smith went behind the counter.

In the ensuing struggle, the woman hit her assailant over the head with his loaded gun.

Mrs. Graham said today she had "no time to get afraid . . . I just hung on to the gun as long as I could."

Mrs. Graham was treated Thursday night for bruises to her left arm.

Smith was picked up by police shortly after on Bay Street, and later identified in a police lineup by his victim. He then admitted the offence.

Ceilings, Handicaps And a Softball Fuss

Volume 2 hit the street this week with some advice for youngsters on Russian hockey training methods: Stickhandling on one foot, then the other; sitting down, rocking on their bottoms, while still stickhandling; games of leapfrog, faster and faster; a run through sawdust in a pit, obviously designed to strengthen the ankles . . . and more, much of it very informative.

There once was a ceiling placed on player salaries in the National Hockey League. In 1932 it was agreed by the club owners that no player should get more than $7,500 for a season's work. The move was so successful that the players didn't even complain. So what did the NHL owners do the next year? They lowered the ceiling to $7,000.

Today, there is no ceiling, and the average salary is between $40,000 and $45,000, and going up. There's not even a roof.

The latest in golf is that handicaps are going up this year, even if you shoot the same as you did last year. If you played to a 20 handicap in 1972, it will be 22 this summer. Last year handicaps were compiled on the basis of 85 per cent of the differentials for the lowest 10 of the last 20 rounds. This year 96 per cent of the differentials will apply on the low 10. Head-to-head is out in match play. Now 90 per cent of the difference will be invoked to the nearest whole number.

In curling, there could be a run on chamois next season. Yes, that's the latest in curling equipment, even if it is only from the home market at present. Long-sliding players in many rinks have had chamois sewn on the right sleeves of their sweaters, the better to brake at the hogline with when delivering the rock. It works. And also, in Eastern Canada (and at the Racquet Club here) there has been a definite swing to the brush from the broom. Sales of the brush brooms are up 25 per cent.

Now there's a new version of the old and continuing fuss between the two rival city men's softball factions, at Heywood Park and Central Park. Seemingly they are about to go their own separate ways again amid confusion, contention and controversy.

It was suggested here last year, and also the season before, there should be some form of amalgamation. Inter-league competition would be a boon to the sport. Fans on one side of the city would get to see how the teams on the other side play. Leagues could work together, instead of apart.

Well, apparently, it almost came about this winter. Then talks broke down, and off. Personalities became involved. People jumped ship. And right now the two sides are at loggerheads, and name calling once more.

Obviously there are problems peculiar to both sides. But that's no reason the differences can't be resolved, or reconciled to the satisfaction of the majority. As it stands now, softball stands to suffer because of some muddled thinking on both sides. So why not get together, above board, and try again. Well, why not?

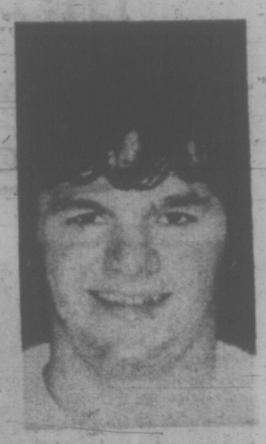
Meanwhile, in answer to a query, Pierre Pilote, the former Chicago Black Hawk defenceman is coaching midget hockey in Toronto . . . Doug Harvey is an assistant coach at Houston in the WHA . . . Shane Gould, Australia's swim star, hasn't immigrated to the U.S. She is only attending school in California for a three-month period before returning home. Also, yes, it is true, Tim Horton is being paid by three NHL teams, Buffalo, New York and Pittsburgh, because of previous deals and trades. Naturally, some of the payments are being deferred. And dates of Canada Summer Games at New Westminster are Aug. 3-12.

Speaking of the Canada Games, there is a possibility that Miss Gould will be prevailed upon to compete in the inaugural meet in the new Canada Games Pool in March.

Little Wing Has Sock



MARCEL DIONNE
. . . going great

By The Canadian Press

One of the players Detroit Red Wings are counting on to put them into the National Hockey League playoffs this season is Marcel Dionne, and the flashy little centre is not disappointing them.

Dionne, who set a scoring record for rookies last season with 77 points, got all three goals Thursday night in his team's 3-3 tie with Montreal Canadiens, leaders in the NHL's East Division.

With the win, the Red Wings, fifth in the East, kept pace with fourth-place Buffalo Sabres in their fight for the last playoff spot.

The Sabres, four points ahead of the Wings, defeated Vancouver Canucks 3-1 while Pittsburgh Penguins edged New York Islanders 2-1 in the only other games Thursday night.

Dionne, the league's outstanding rookie in the 1971-72 season, led the Detroit club in scoring with 77 points. His development as a scorer and playmaker in the latter half of last season contributed much to the club's drive.

This season, except for a little misunderstanding between him and coach Johnny Wilson who thought he was "going at half speed" earlier in the schedule Dionne has continued his fine playmaking.

His three goals Thursday night gave him 31 for the season, three more than his goal output last year. He is also six points short of equalling his point-total for last season.

The Sabres got a goal and an assist from Don Luce in handing the Canucks their 39th loss in 63 games. Luce's goal, the first in the game, came in the first period when he took a pass from Jim Schoenfeld and skated in to lift the puck past goalie Ed Dyck.

Senior Rinks Eye Playoff

SUDBURY, Ont. — A playoff for the Canadian seniors curling championship appeared imminent after three rinks started today's final round with 7-2, won-lost records.

British Columbia's Roy Stone, Dr. Bill McTavish of Manitoba and Ralph Smith of Noranda, Que., representing Northern Ontario, fell into the three-way tie because of the confidence of New Brunswick's Jim Murphy.

Virtually eliminated when beaten by McTavish 11-4 Thursday afternoon, Murphy anticipated "no problem" in his evening meeting with once-beaten Northern Ontario "because we play a style which can beat them."

That's how it turned out. Murphy forced Smith to abandon his draw game and, piling up all his points on four ends, upset the Northern Ontario rink 11-5.

McTavish's Winnipeg rink won its seventh game by shading Ontario 8-7 while the cigar-chewing Stone, a familiar figure in national competition, bouyed B.C. hopes with his 9-7 triumph over Prince Edward Island and a 10-8 decision over the tough Saskatchewan foursome skipped by Gil Strumm of Saskatoon.

Stone sealed his victory over Strumm by counting a five-ender on the seventh end to take a commanding 10-5 lead.

In this morning's key games, Stone went against Alberta, skipped by Bob Cruikshank of Red Deer; Northern Ontario met Ontario, and Manitoba faced lightly-regarded Nova Scotia.

COLLEGIANS PACKING BRIGHT SOCCER MARK

Victoria Gorge Molsons, currently occupying second place in the Pacific Coast Soccer League, will be facing a formidable Mainland Inter-City League opponent in an interlocking match Saturday at 2 p.m. in Royal Athletic Park.

Simon Fraser University has nine wins, one loss and one tie this season — and that one loss wasn't in any interlocking contest.

In fact, bolstered by spectacular goaltending from Tony Chursky, who now has the best record in both leagues, SFU defeated PCSL-leading Victoria West-United 3-1 earlier this season.

United, which has a one-point edge over Gorge, faces Vancouver Sporting Club in an interlocking Sunday match on the Mainland.

Cents Topple Tigers With Rousing Finish

By The Canadian Press

It was a night of close calls in the Western Canada Hockey League Thursday as Edmonton Oil Kings shaded host Brandon Wheat Kings 4-3 and Calgary Centennials outhustled visiting Medicine Hat Tigers 5-4.

Darcy Rota scored two goals and assisted on two others a the Oil Kings took a 2-1 firstperiod lead only to have the Wheat Kings recover 3-3 in the second before 3,309 fans.

The goals were Rota's 62nd and 63rd of the season, second only to Brandon's Ron Chipperfield whose total is 66.

The hockey at Calgary was head-to-head throughout the first 40 minutes of play before a scoring spree in the third period, which also featured an outstanding display of penalty catching fisticuffs.

The score was tied 2-2 until 14:22 of the third period—on goals by Mike Clarke of Calgary and Lanny McDonald of Medicine Hat—before the game became a free-for-all.

Holland and Russ Wiechnik put the Centennials ahead 4-2; McDonald closed the gap to 4-3 with his second goal, John Phillips put Calgary ahead 5-3 and then McDonald scored goal No. 3 to close out the game with 11 seconds remaining.

Canada Advances

Jesus Sotelo scored the first Mexican goal at 35 minutes of the first half after dribbling around fullback Jett Sim and shooting with such strength that the ball hit goalkeeper Andre Salt in the chest before going into the net. Oscar Padilla scored the second Mexican goal after 10 minutes of the second half.

Mexico defeated Nicaragua 7-0 Sunday and Canada tied Nicaragua 1-1 Tuesday. The three countries played in one group. Guatemala, the Netherlands Antilles and Cuba were in another group.

Milwaukee Wins

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — John McGlocklin hit two straight baskets from the baseline in a 13-second span to lift Milwaukee Bucks to a 116-113 overtime victory over Kansas-City Omaha Kings in the only National Basketball Association contest Thursday night.

McGlockin's effort gave Milwaukee a 114-110 lead with 1:12 remaining. Lucius Allen completed the Buck's scoring on a jumper with 42 seconds left.

Nate Archibald, playing despite a bruised knee, scored all nine of the Kings' points in the overtime. Archibald, who missed a game in Buffalo Tuesday night and played only the first 15 minutes in Sunday's game at Detroit, finished with 43 points.

ADAMANT REF IGNITES CHAOS ON SOCCER FIELD

SALVADOR, Brazil (Reuter) — Two players were hurt Thursday when riot police staged a series of baton charges across the pitch in one of the worst outbreaks of violence in Brazilian soccer history.

The first-division league match between Bahia and Flamengo of Rio de Janeiro erupted into chaos two minutes before the scheduled end and play was held up for an hour as angry players, police, officials and spectators scuffled on and off the pitch.

The violence was watched on television by soccer fans throughout the country, and soccer officials set up an inquiry into the incident.

The trouble began when referee Garibaldi Matos ordered a penalty against Flamengo, who were leading by 1-0. Flamengo goalkeeper Renato saved the kick but Matos ordered the penalty to be retaken.

His decision brought irate protests from the Flamengo players and, when the Rio team set about their opponents, steel-helmeted riot police raced on to the pitch to intervene.

The Flamengo players fled across the pitch in the face of the police baton charge and Flamengo defender Freddy and goalkeeper Renato said later they had been injured in the police action.

The second penalty kick was eventually taken and again saved by Renato but when Matos ordered the kick to be taken for a third time the violence flared again.

Sufficient order was restored for the penalty to be taken again and Bahia drew level at 1-1. The turbulent match ended with the Flamengo players and the referee being escorted off the pitch.

UVic Rugby Teams on Road

University of Victoria's rugby Vikings and Norsemen open their intercollegiate schedule this weekend with a pair of games in Seattle and Bellingham.

Vikings open their season Saturday in Seattle against University of Washington Huskies, who boast several Canadian players, including winger Roy Fiddick from St. Michael's University School in Victoria.

Both teams are in Bellingham Sunday against Western Washington.

Viking coaches Ray Calton and Ian McLean have an all-new back row up from the Norsemen in Ken McRae, Chris Spicer and Doug Manning, along with two new centres in Laurie Garett and Dennis Hamilton. Gaither Zinkan and Rod Finch spearhead the regulars.

In other rugby action, UVic Jutes freshman team travels to Vancouver for games Saturday against Capilano College and Sunday against Douglas College.

In volleyball, UVic Vikings and Vikettes will take part in the B.C. open tournament at Simon Fraser this weekend. Winners will receive half their travel costs to Ottawa for the national tournament March 22-24.

Vikings will be without two of their national collegiate team candidates, Ken Lundeen (sprained ankle) and Greg Russell (broken hand). Vancouver Volleyball Club is the tourney favorite.

Vikettes must rely on strong defensive play and the hitting of Sharon Kinghorn in order to get by favored Chimos and University of British Columbia in the women's tournament.

The hockey Vikings also will be in Vancouver to close out their Canada West season with games against UBC Thunderbirds tonight and Saturday. Vikings are winless in 22 starts.

In basketball, Vikettes have completed their schedule in third place in the Canada West women's division but play Simon Fraser at UVic gym in an exhibition game Saturday at 6:30 p.m.

At Lethbridge, UVic teams won only once in four draws as the CWUAA men's and women's curling championships opened Thursday.

The only success was recorded by UVic's women's entry, which downed host University of Lethbridge 10-4 in its second game. Earlier, UBC dropped UVic girls, 10-2.

Milestone Marker Topples Nationals

By The Canadian Press

Danny Lawson, a fugitive from the National Hockey League where until recent times a 50-goal season was a rare happening, has reached that milestone in the new World Hockey Association.

Lawson scored the winning goal Thursday night, his 50th of the season, to give Philadelphia Blazers a 6-5 victory over Ottawa Nationals in WHA action. He thus became the first player in the new professional league to score 50 goals in a season.

Lawson, who scored only 10 goals in 78 games with Buffalo Sabres of the NHL in the 1971-72 season, was signed by Philadelphia last July. But since joining the Blazers and playing on a line with Andre Lacroix and Don Herriman, he has blossomed into a scorer.

It came after Philadelphia's Johnny McKenzie tangled with Ottawa's Guy Trottier along the boards. Although McKenzie was assessed a minor penalty, he managed to flip the puck out in front of the Ottawa net where Plante fired it home. The refereee first disallowed the goal and then changed his mind.

Dunking Cools Fezler

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — Forrest Fezler, a tour sophomore, looked uncertain and a little confused as he tried to shake off a double bogey six that cost him the lead in the richest 72-hole golf tournament on the American tour.

"There's a lot more holes left," the 32-year-old Fezler said. "I'll just try to play it cool the rest of the way."

His four wood tee shot on the short seventh hole in Thursday's first round found the lake on the right and cost him sole possession of first place in the $260,000 Jackie Gleason-Inverrary National Airlines Golf Classic.

The tournament offers $52,000 for first place, more than Fezler has earned in his brief pro career. He's tied with Gay Brewer, who has picked up three cheques bigger than that since scoring his last American victory in the 1967 Masters.

They matched 67s, five under par, on the 7,128-yard Inverray Golf Club course while Lee Trevino made his first challenge of the year and tricky winds took care of many of the other great stars of the game.

Trevino, never a factor in the seven-week western swing, and Gibby Gilbert had 69s, just two strokes back. Rookie Tom Kite had a 70 and defending champion Tom Weiskopf was one of a half dozen at 71.

Nicklaus, at one time two under par with five holes to play, ended up with 73.

Handicap events opened competition Thursday in the Vancouver island open badminton championships at cordova Bay Community Hall.

Action resumes tonight, starting at 7, and continues Saturday, beginning at 1 p.m.

Semi-finals are scheduled to begin at 7 p.m. Saturday and finals will get under way at 1 p.m. Sunday.

Palmer, who broke a long victory drought in his last start, failed to make a birdie in his round of 74.

Steelhead, Salmon Ebb While Trout Get Hungry

Returns of steelhead and salmon tapered off earlier this week but the warmer daytime temperatures are beginning to whet the appetites of both trout anglers and their quarry.

All of the lower-elevation lakes on Vancouver Island now might be worth a bet with either bobber and worm or bait fished right on the bottom.

Most of the higher lakes are still frozen.

On the southern end of the Island, some good catches were taken in Somenos, Quamichan and Dougan's lakes as well as the lower reaches of the Cowichan River (sea-run cutthroat).

Sproat Lake is beginning to perk and anglers have been picking up trout on flies (again fished right on the bottom) along the Willows area of Stirling Arm.

Further north, the water temperatures still appear to be too cold to prompt any action.

Low stream levels have kept steelhead returns low with only the odd catch noted from the Cowichan, Nanaimo, Gold and Salmon rivers.

★ ★ ★

Salmon fishermen, on the other hand, can still find a few fish if they're willing to get out and work.

A few bluebacks and springs up to nine pounds are improving the fishing picture in the southern end of Saanich Inlet near Goldstream Island, Misery Bay and Chesterfield Rock.

Jacks and springs up to 18 pounds have been caught in Coles Bay, Tod Inlet and Indian Bay while the Bamberton side of Saanich Inlet is yielding limited catches of jacks.

The only other spots which have been producing around the Greater Victoria area are near Discovery Light, Trial Island, The Gap, Pedder Bay and the bluffs between Becher Bay and Secretary Island.

Fishermen working deep on the outside of Cowichan Bay are picking up a few springs. Likewise a few catches were noted off Little River, Willow Point, Copper Bluff, Race Point and Duncan Bay.

NIBBLES: Late word comes in over the teletype that the Saskatchewan government is preparing to curtail hunting by non-Canadians if game populations drop significantly . . . Ted Bowerman, natural resources minister, said an aerial survey of game is almost completed and added that Saskatchewan residents should get the first opportunity at hunting in the province, followed by other Canadians and then Americans . . . His statement closely follows a resolution passed last week by the Saskatchewan Wildlife Federation calling for cancellation of aliens' hunting rights.

Memo to EF . . . Ling cod season opens March 1 . . . Any caught before that time should be turned loose . . . Black brant also come into season for shotgunners on that date.

Totems Slap Hornets

Victoria Totems tripped visiting Mount View Hornets 63-44 Thursday night to vault into a three-way tie for first place in the Victoria High School Boys' Basketball League.

Totems, Oak Bay Bays and Mount Douglas Rams now all have 7-1 records and lead the fourth-place Hornets by two points.

After edging to a 25-20 lead at half time, Totems exploded to outscore Hornets 15-4 in the third quarter and seemed content to coast through a high-scoring final frame.

Island Meet For Archers

Victoria Bowmen and Cedar Forest Bowmen will stage the annual Vancouver Island indoor archery championships, starting at 10 a.m. Sunday at Work Point Barracks gymnasium.

Expected to defend titles won last year are Wanda Allen, Tony Hoffman and Jim Shields of Seaview Archers (Victoria), Dan Mawer of Victoria Bowmen, George Pierce of Ladysmith Golden Arrows and Mary Jessee of Courtenay Bowmen.

There is no admission charge for spectators.

Hoop Event

Shoreline is hosting three other teams in a junior high school boys' invitational basketball tournament starting today.

Sutherland of North Vancouver and Shoreline meet in the opening game at 5 p.m. and Highrock tackles Colquitz at 6:30.

The venue switches to Esquimalt High School for Saturday games.

ESQUIMALT CAPTURES FORCES HOCKEY TITLE

CFB Esquimalt hewed an unbeaten path to the Pacific Regional Armed Forces hockey championships, which ended Regional Armed Forces hockey championships, which ended Thursday at Esquimalt Sports Centre.

Esquimalt finished the three-day, four-team, round-robin tournament by defeating CFB Comox 4-1 in the final game.

Comox earned the second spot with a 2-1 record while CFB Holberg and HMC Ships, after battling to a 5-5 deadlock in the other Thursday game, had one tie and two losses each.

Stockers Finish With a Flourish

And still the favorites . . .

That's how first-place finishing Stocker North Americans look towards the playoffs after completing the Victoria Intermediate Hockey League schedule Thursday with a one-sided 7-1 victory over Ingraham Buckaroos.

League playoffs will get under way next Thursday.

Lawrie Huck and Roger Thompson each scored two goals to spark Stockers. Ken Waet, Bob Martin and Errol Goulden contributed singles while Gord Strongman scored the only goal for the second-place Bucks.

Tips for Royal Vic Sailors

Last weekend was a busy one at the Royal Victoria Yacht Club for large-boat skippers and dinghy sailors alike.

For the big boat types it was an opportunity to pick the brains of two of Vancouver's sailing experts, sailmaker Dave Miller and Donny Martin, whose Martin 29, which he designed to hit the half-ton rating on the nose, is selling like the proverbial hotcake.

After a clubhouse session Saturday, Dave and Donny were afloat in several RVYC boats Sunday, giving some pointers on how to make gear and sails work more effectively.

Donny was the skipper of the Royal Vancouver Yacht Club crew that soundly trounced a crew from Toronto in the first east-west match racing for keel boats, Canada's own version of the America's Cup.

Dinghy enthusiasts were out in force, competing in the men's championships, sailed in Davidsons.

A blow was struck for Women's Lib. when Tara Kenning edged the male competition to become the new junior El Toro champion. Coming second and third after her were Jim's sons, Mike and Tom.

Beginning at 10 a.m. Saturday, Davidson sailors will pace it out in the open championships. Centreboard skippers will get down to their final session of series racing at 1:30 p.m.

The Thunderbird fleet held winter championships last weekend. Glen Higgins' Freeway came first, winning the Lemolo Trophy. Glen pulled off two firsts, a second and a fifth. Walter Boyes' Baht'at placed second and world champion John Malleson's Sunday had to settle for third spot.

The Turkey Head Sailing Association has two races slated for Sunday in waters off Oak Bay Marina. Start times are 10 a.m. and 1:30 p.m.

Miles Dighton's Obsession and Gerry Howell-Jones' Sian placed first and second in both of the last THSA races. In the first sailout Sian was trailed by Jack Woodward's Puff II, Gordie Vickery's Valhalla and Steve Merriman's Vandal.

In the last race Obsession and Sian were followed by Hugh Porter's Errigal, Greg Oliver's Sea Fax III and Rich Heatherington's Merph.

AROUND OUR SHORES

By Pat Dufour

will be out for another six-miler in waters off Sidney on Sunday. Start time is 10 a.m.

Back after cycling holidays in England and Hawaii, Bert Buchanan sailed his Cal 25 Lairig Ghru to second spot last Saturday, losing out to Al Brownlee's Alana. Coming next over-all were Merv Bretton's Bird of Dawning, Dave Taylor's Achates, Denny Davis' Rozinante, Gordie Inglis' Water Melon, Peter Grant's Alternate, Willi Fahning's Lille Baelt, Ken Carter's Panic and Louis Lindholm's Moonraker.

Basketball Jamboree Saturday

All boys and girls in the Victoria and District Amateur Basketball Association, from pre-midget to bantam level, will be taking part in their annual jamboree Saturday, starting at 9:30 a.m. in Victoria High School.

Action continues all day until approximately 9:30 p.m., when both team and individual awards will be made for each division.

Meanwhile, playoffs are now under way in both the girls' and boys' midget divisions.

The top four girls' squads are battling for a berth in the B.C. finals scheduled to be held in Lake Cowichan, March 10-11. Four boys' clubs are vying for a berth in the provincial championships in Cumberland sometime in late march.

Let's talk mortgages, and how to borrow up to 95% of the cost of the home you want to buy.

Yes, if you are steadily employed and not over stretching the family budget, it is possible to borrow up to 95% of the price of your home. With a new plan we call High Ratio Conventional Mortgages. Here are examples of how it works:

Total cost of house	$30,000	$40,000	$50,000
% you could borrow	95%	95%	95% of $40,000 75% of next $10,000
Amount available to you	$28,500	$38,000	$45,500

You get all the money from us. You don't have to deal with any second lender. And, our rates are comparable to (and in some cases even lower than) those of other recognized mortgage lenders.

At the Bank of Montreal, we want to see you get the home you want with as little fuss and cash outlay as possible. So come on in and let's talk High Ratio Mortgages.
So you can get on with the buying of your home.

Avis has a new flat daily rate that can save you up to 45% over our '72 rates. Read how this radical development changed these people's ideas about transportation. It could change yours too.

The business man who usually takes cabs.

Donald Morrison, company president. Donald does a lot of flying in the course of his business. But when he used to arrive at his destination, he'd always take a limousine downtown, use cabs to go from meeting to meeting. Then when it was time to go home, he'd take another limousine back to the airport. But then Donald heard about the Avis flat daily rate. It didn't take him too long to figure out the savings. On his most recent trip, he rented a sparkling new Plymouth Fury III for one day, drove himself downtown, did 79 miles and paid just $15 plus gas. That's all. Think about it.

1 day and 79 miles for just $15 plus gas. $15

Bob and Peggy Byron live in a big city high-rise. Weekdays, Bob and Peggy use public transportation.

But at weekends it's another story because they're ski enthusiasts. They used to take the bus or the train to get to the slopes—until they heard about the Avis flat weekend rate. Then...bingo! They realized they could pick up a sparkling new Plymouth Satellite with ski racks on Friday noon, keep it until Monday 9 am and drive all the miles they wanted to for just $28 and gas! (That's 2½ days for the price of two). Now they're regular Avis renters. Shouldn't you be?

2½ days and 420 miles for just $28 plus gas. $28

John Pinkham has a nice new car of his own...but he also coaches a pee-wee hockey team that plays a lot of games in distant arenas. He used to go to all the trouble of organizing car pools until he heard about the Avis flat daily rate. Then he realized that a roomy Avis station wagon was the answer because it was affordable!

Last game he packed the whole team in a big Dodge Polara Station Wagon, drove 36 miles to the opposition arena, won the game and drove back for just $18 and gas. Shouldn't you be scoring too?

1 day and 72 miles for just $18 plus gas. $18

Ron Hearnden is on the sales force of a big company. He has his own four-year-old compact which he used to drive on all his calls. Then he heard about the Avis flat daily rate with no mileage charge. Ron very quickly figured that driving a sparkling new Avis car on those long trips made a lot more sense than using the family car.

On his last trip, he made seven calls, logged 410 miles and kept the Plymouth Duster for two days for just $26 plus gas.

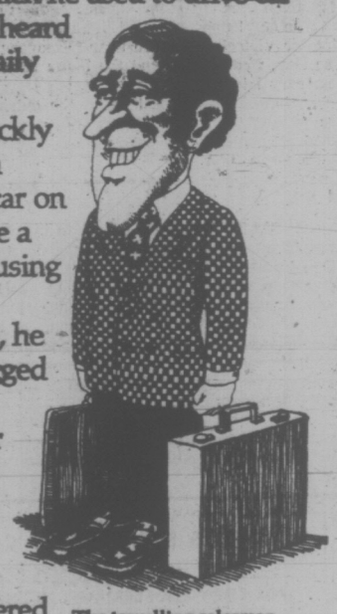
2 days and 410 miles for just $26 plus gas. $26



The travelling salesman who needs a bigger car from time to time.

The point is, thousands of Canadians like these have found out about the great new Avis flat daily rate which turns car renting into a practical, affordable, everyday solution to their transportation needs.

Stiffened Firearm Laws Eyed

By VICTOR MACKIE
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — The federal government is considering tightening, by regulation, the sale and registration of guns, Solicitor General Warren Allmand told th Commons Thursday.

He was replying to Eldon Woolliams (PC-Calgary North) who said many Canadians were gravely concerned over the increase in crimes across the country.

Woolliams said that the number of crimes involving the use of hand guns and other weapons was on the increase.

Sportsmen who use guns for hunting, however, are worried about the possiblility of the federal government moving to tighten up the possession of guns, he said.

He asked Allmand if it is the government's policy to "toughen up by regulation the sale and registration of guns.

Allmand said, "This is being considered."

Woolliams asked if there are any new regulations that were passed under the amendments to the Criminal Code. He said that the amendments brought into effect in 1969 and 1970 empowered the government to pass regulations for the sale of registration of weapons.

Allmand said there are no new regulations "at present."

The solicitor general is working hard behind the scenes in cabinet to get gun control regulations passed. He presented to the commons last year, when he was a backbencher, a private bill proposing new federal gun control regulations.

Stuart Legatt (NDP-New Westminster) has presented an almost identical private member's bill to this session of parliament.

There is division in the cabinet, however, on tighter gun controls.

Justice Minister Otto Lang told newsmen recently that he is not enthusiastic about stricter gun control laws.

The bill introduced originally by Allmand as a backbencher, represents a tightening of federal gun legislation the, sale and ownership of hand guns, automatic weapons and sawed-off shot-guns and rifles is restricted to persons granted permits by police or provincial attorneys general.

There is no restriction on the ownership of regular shotguns or rifles for hunting purposes.

The private bill proposed by Allmand before he was in the cabinet would outlaw machine guns and shortened guns. There would be restrictions on the ownership of all other guns.

Members pressing for tighter gun controls want to see legislation requiring gun purchasers to show identification, and to list all other firearms in their possession. They say that a buyer and seller should be jointly responsible for registering a gun. Registration should include the reason for purchase.

The seller should be required to send the information to a central registry office. The law should require that no guns could be sold to persons with criminal records, or who have a history of mental illness or an addiction to drugs, say the MP's and senators who are calling for tighter gun control.

Saanich Hearing Set on Parkland

A public hearing on the first municipal park zoning category in Saanich is expected to be held next month.

If the zoning bylaw amendment is accepted by council and by the subsequent public hearing, council will have a list of 46 parks from which to choose those for the new zone.

Alternatively, if council accepts a list of parks before it orders a public hearing, the parks listed could be attached to the amendment to be discussed at the hearing.

In a report last November, the municipal planner recommended that 34 parks out of the total be accepted by council for reservation as a means of protecting them from possible encroachment or development.

Only parks which were expected to remain unchanged in their respective neighborhoods were recommended for reservation.

Traditionally, Saanich has allowed its park system to grow without special status as one means of ensuring flexibility of development. When land is zoned for park use, or dedicated by order in council, removing it from such status becomes more difficult.

Community pressure in the past two years has helped push the council toward classification as a safeguard to parks.

The amendment has been through the municipal solicitor's hands and has gone back to the planning department. The next public hearing, on Monday, already has a full agenda, but the following session will be about mid-March.

Restroom 'Private'

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The California supreme court ruled Thursday that policemen cannot hide in public restrooms to watch patrons unless they have probable cause to believe a crime is being committed there.

The court held that such spying was illegal exploratory search and violated the constitutional rights of privacy.

"When innocent people are subjected to illegal searches — including when, as here, they do not even know their private parts and bodily functions are being exposed to the gaze of the law — their rights are violated even though such searches turn up no evidence of guilt," the unanimous decision said.

The court overturned the conviction of a man arrested by a detective in a restroom at a Los Angeles public park after the officer peered through an air vent and witnessed an illegal sex act between two men.

MLA COMMITTEES KEEP THEM BUSY

The committee system at the legislature got into high gear this week, leaving some MLAs wondering how they could be in two or three places at once.

Gary Lauk (NDP—Vancouver Centre) attended the opening meeting of social welfare and education at 9 a.m. Thursday but had to leave at 9:30 a.m. to chair the committee on standing orders and private bills.

Scott Wallace (PC—Oak Bay) also had to leave the social welfare and education committee at 9:30 a.m. to attend the session on standing orders and private bills.

Wallace commented: "It is ridiculous that I am only permitted to be on two committees, due to our small representation in the house, and both committees are meeting at the same time."

The provincial government has established nine committees to study in detail various proposed legislation. Most committees contain 10 or 11 members and there is considerable overlapping.

Rosemary Brown (NDP—Vancouver Burrard) said the MLAs would just have to learn to live with the problem although careful scheduling could alleviate some of the overlapping.

Victoria General Budget Up $2M

The operating budget for Victoria General Hospital is estimated at $11,644,000 this year, close to $2 million more than 1972, members were told at a board meeting Thursday night.

The 428-bed hospital admitted 14,500 patients last year, 1,200 more than the previous year, while having two less beds available, acting executive director John Murray said later.

The average length of patient stay was shaved from 9.7 to 9.38 days in 1972. Emergency cases rose about 1,000 to 26,500.

Murray told the board that the hospital's ambulatory care unit is now operating at its planned capacity of 13 cases daily. The ambulatory or day care surgery handles operations where patients go home the same day.

The hospital is now studying ways it might expand the workload in the unit by functioning in conjuction with a program to provide care for patients in their homes following surgery, he added.

Murray, who is the hospital's comptroller and assistant executive director, has also been acting executive director since the resignation of Dr. Embert Van Tilburg last July.

The new executive director, hired last month by the board, is James Fair, 39. He leaves his post as director of diagnostic services at Vancouver General Hospital to take the Victoria General position March 16.

Murray thanked the board Thursday night for its support over the past eight months and said he thought staff morale had been restored and efficiency maintained.

Board member Fred Norris, in a tribute to Murray, said the board regretted it had not been able to persuade Murray to apply for the executive director's post.

Mackenzie Railway

EDMONTON (CP) — A rail line down the Mackenzie River valley would provide more jobs and cause less environmental damage than a pipeline, Grant Notley, Alberta's New Democratic Party leader, said Wednesday.

Notley told the legislature a pipeline would create only 400 permanent jobs, but a railway would employ 5,000 workers and create another 13,000 jobs in southern Canada.

Cattle Buyers To Subsidize Promotion

Every purchaser of cattle at a cattle sale in B.C. will have to pay a special levy toward a fund used for promotion of the cattle industry ,under legislation introduced Thursday by Agriculture Minister Dave Stupich.

The Cattle Industry Development Act would establish a Cattle Industry Development Board to administer the fund and allocate money from it to any cattlemen's association for activities designed to promote the industry and general educational purposes.

Stupich told reporters the legislation is primarily intended to help the Cattlemen's Association of B.C. which has found that its 35-cent per capital levy of members for promoting the industry is inadequate.

The legislation provides that contravention of the act will be liable to fines up to $200 for individuals, or 90 days' imprisonment, and $500 for a corporation.

Cranky Suzie Up for Sale For $500

INDEPENDENCE, Kan. (UPI) — Suzie, an eight-ton Ceylonese elephant, went on sale today for $500 because of her tendency for throwing rocks.

Assistant zookeeper Ed Kline said Suzie likes to throw things with her trunk and has hurled rocks and whole chunks of earth through automobile windshields.

Another bad personality trait is her dislike for peacocks. Kline said she has chased the colorful birds sharing her quarters into the trees.

"We want her to have a good home," he said. "She's cranky at times, but I think it's because she's lonely."

Let's Hear the Voices For 'Plot' Gardening

The idea of allotment gardens on a national scale goes back to 1907, when the scheme was introduced to England by an American. The city of Philadelphia has already proved its value.

Ottawa has been operating allotments for the past three years, and now Saanich has signified willingness to consider a similar project here, if enough interest is shown by the public.

Saanich Peninsula has been known for its farms and productive gardens ever since it had a name.

Allotment gardens raising vegetables may be the means not only of keeping family budgets under control but also a partial answer to having cultivated areas of plants on spare ground to compensate for the lack of outside interests and the loneliness sometimes developing for those who take to apartment living.

It has been said that people go to live in apartments because they no longer want or are able to cope with their own home and garden.

While this condition does exist, it is only a partial truth, for several couples have already asked for more details of the proposed allotment gardens. The small plot is the attraction in getting them back to the garden work and relaxation which they formerly enjoyed and now are missing.

At this stage, there are no firm details to be given, only the tentative plan of the municipality to rent plots of ground to gardeners (in blocks of possibly 50 plots at one site) for a small annual fee.

Young people with families, single men and women in apartments, or retired people, any person interested in working a plot (something like 25 by 50 feet) is asked to write a note signifying their interest in the scheme. Until public reaction is known, even the location of a site cannot be designated.

★ ★ ★

Lands, Housing and Social Services Committee,

Saanich Municipal Hall, 770 Vernon Ave., Victoria.

The next meeting of the committee to consider this proposition is less than one month from now. During this period I'm hoping to see enough enthusiasm for the idea to launch active plans during March and April.

Phone calls cannot be presented to the committee as factual evidence of your interest, so write. I shall be pleased to answer questions on the project as it stands at present.

Ottawa now has 1800 allotment gardens; England had an estimated 1,500,000. Let us launch Saanich on her first 50, then work on expanding a really profitable scheme for yourselves and the community.

SOLUTION MONDAY

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

One of the attributes of the better player is his recognition that on every deal he must make an attempt to "count out" the distribution of the opponents' cards. He makes this attempt despite the realization that he will be unable to obtain this "count" on every deal. This ingrained approach serves him well, for it frequently eliminates the necessity for guesswork. An example can be observed in today's deal.

Both sides vulnerable. South deals.

◇ A Q 4
♣ A 9 8 5

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
2 NT	Pass	6 NT	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Jack of ◇.

West opens the jack of diamonds, which you win with dummy's king. To trick two you lead the queen of clubs and finesse when East follows suit with the four-spot. If East is the possessor of the club king, you are home, since by repeated club finesses you will make four club tricks, three diamonds, three hearts, and two spades.

But on this particular day, West captures the queen with his king. He returns a diamond which you take with your queen. On this trick, East discards the deuce of spades.

At this point you have eleven sure winners. The twelfth trick, if it is to be forthcoming, must come from the spade suit, for all other avenues are closed. The issue, specifically and exclusively, is: who has the queen of spades, East or West? The answer is found by "counting out the hand."

When West returned a diamond at trick three, East failed to follow suit. Therefore, West is known to have been dealt six diamonds. West has also been revealed as the possessor of at least one club (the king). You next cash the jack and ace of clubs, noting that West follows suit to both of these club leads. So West started with six diamonds and three clubs.

Next comes the king, ace, and queen of hearts, it being observed that West follows suit to all three leads. Thus twelve of West's original thirteen cards are known: three hearts, three clubs, and six diamonds.

A low spade is now led to dummy's king, West playing the three-spot. West's thirteen original cards are now an open book. A spade is then returned off dummy, and the jack is finessed with the assurance that it will win the trick. The score is then recorded for a vulnerable small slam bid and made.

FUN WITH FIGURES

By J. A. H. HUNTER

Doug held up a sheet of paper. "Look, Dad," he said. "Our new phone number."

"I know. Seven figures to remember." Harry nodded. "What about it?"

"It's really something," the boy replied. "If you add the square of the first three figures to the square of the last four, you get the complete number again."

What was it?

(Answer Monday)

Yesterday's answer: KOOKY was 51127 (prime).

Federal NDP To Review Plans For Next Vote

OTTAWA (CP) — The New Democratic Party federal council will meet here this weekend to review plans for the next election.

The party said the federal council also will discuss preparations for the NDP national convention in Vancouver in July.

Spiro Portrait Vanishes

ANNAPOLIS (WP) — When last seen, the official portrait of Vice-President Spiro Agnew, due to soon hang on the wall with those of other Maryland governors, was being spirited out of the State House by two Agnew aides.

Draped with a cloth, it was placed in the back of a white station wagon bearing a White House emblem and transported in the general direction of Washington.

Its final location remains unknown.

Where and why it went to where it went is a mystery.

Governor Marvin Mandel's office said the portrait was removed for security reasons.

Agnew's office said it was taken because it needed some touching up.

The artist, Robert Tollast, said he had not asked for it back and the portrait needed no touching up.

Tollast will hear none of that.

The vice-president and his aides praised him for the work, he said. Everyone approved.

SNOWMOBILERS RESUME TREK

EDMONTON (CP) — Six Minnesota residents left here Thursday by plane for the high Arctic to resume an expedition by power toboggan that started in their home state and will end — they hope — in Moscow.

They left Edmonton, where the temperature was 45 above, for Devon Island, which recorded 72 below at the same time, to return to where they left their power toboggans and other equipment when forced to stop last May.

"We hope to make it to Moscow this year but we're not guaranteeing whether we will or not," said expedition leader William (Wild Bill) Cooper, a native of Hythe, Alta., who now owns two bars and a motel in Willow River, Minnesota.

He told a news conference the roughness of the ice surfaces they have to cross, the weather and amount of open water vary so much from one moment to another that predictions are worthless.

His group is called the Trans-World Snowmobile Expedition and is sponsored by the companies that supply the machines and other equipment and goods involved.

They left Minneapolis on Jan. 31, 1972, and travelled mainly alongside highways to Winnipeg. They then entered the bush, travelling to Churchill, Man., then up the coast of Hudson Bay and overland across Melville Peninsula to the Arctic Ocean.

They plan to travel by boat or air to Norway and again by power toboggan through parts of Sweden, Finland and the Soviet Union until they reach Moscow.

Course to Study Leisure Ethic

In California there are men who take jobs as firemen because the hours don't interfere with their main interest in life — surfing.

In Banff there are girls who work as waitresses just so they can be in good skiing country.

Both are products of the leisure ethic, a phenomenon of the post-industrial age that will come under the scrutiny of the University of Victoria's sociology department next year.

A half-year credit course in the sociology of liesure will be offered in the 1973-74 calendar.

And one of the things sociologist Dr. Donald Ball and his students will be looking at is leisure-defined lifestyles — people whose "major activity peg is a leisure activity," be it skiing, volleyball or surfing.

Ball said studies have shown that blue collar workers in their spare time are consumers of the media and paid entertainment — TV, movies, big sports events.

The higher up you go in the class structure, he said, the more people spend their leisure as members of voluntary associations, in "extra-familial socializing" (cocktail parties and get-togethers with friends), in travel and the arts.

The course will look at things that produce leisure time, like the changing work week, said Ball. It will also examine the problem of arriving at one complete definition of leisure.

To some people leisure simply means free time, goofing off, non-work, said Ball.

To others, it means the way free time is used, things like sport and TV and reading that people do to fill free time.

And what about a man who spends his time after work reading up in his professional field, Ball asks. Can this really be classified as leisure?

Quebec's Bertrand Dies After Surgery

MONTREAL (CP) — The heart problems that troubled and shortened the political career of Jean-Jacques Bertrand caught up with the former Quebec premier Thursday despite major open-heart surgery to save his life.

Mr. Bertrand, 57, Union Nationale premier from Sept. 26, 1968 until April, 1970, died Thursday after a two-hour operation earlier in the day and six hours of surgery Wednesday.

The Wednesday operation at the Montreal Heart Institute involved taking healthy veins from his legs and grafting them to replace congested heart vessels.

Shortly after his death was revealed, Premier Robert Bourassa, whose Liberals ousted Mr. Bertrand's government in the April, 1970 election, announced the legislature was adjourned until Tuesday "as a mark of respect."

The premier expressed the condolences and "gratitude" of all Quebecers to the Bertrand family. "It was with immense regret I learned of his passing."

DEDICATION RECALLED

All Quebec would remember Mr. Bertrand's "sense of duty, integrity, courage and dedication to serve Quebec during a 25-year career."

Mr. Bertrand will be buried Sunday in the Eastern Townships community of Cowansville.

He was first elected in 1948 and, during his 20-year career in the national assembly, held four cabinet posts before becoming premier in 1968 following the death of then Premier Daniel Johnson, also of a heart attack.

Even though he suffered a heart attack in 1968, Mr. Bertrand was pronounced fit for the leadership.

His interim party stewardship was confirmed at a party convention in June, 1969 when he defeated Jean-Guy Cardinal, 1,327 votes to 938.

The Union Nationale went into the 1970 election with 55 seats in the 108-seat legislature but Premier Bourassa's Liberals swept to power winning 72 seats. The Union Nationale was left with 17, the Creditiste took 12 and the Parti Quebecois won seven.

Two months after the defeat, Mr. Bertrand announced he was retiring because of ill health. Gabriel Loubier succeeded him as leader at a party convention the following June.

Bangladesh Aid Tops $20 Million

OTTAWA (CP) — The government is giving Bangladesh another $7 million to buy up to 65,000 tons of wheat, the Canadian International Development Agency announced Wednesday.

The grant brings total Canadian wheat aid to Bangladesh in 1973 to $20 million. Shipment of the first 190,000 tons began early this month.

IT'S NOW 22 MILLION PLUS

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada's population sneaked past the 22-million mark sometime early Thursday, but population clock-watchers at Information Canada missed the moment.

By noon, the clock in the Information Canada bookstore was several thousand past 22 million.

"We don't know what time it reached 22 million," an official said. "We've been waiting for that for weeks, but when it happened we were so busy we missed it."

The clock is a computer that estimates population minute by minute by a formula based on known trends in births, deaths and migration.

The official census in June 1, 1971, showed population as 21,568,315, up from 18,238,247 in 1961. The population hit 20 million in 1966 and was 20,014,880 June 1 that year.

City Restaurant Picketed

Employees on strike against a Vancouver branch of Denny's Restaurant chain picketed the Victoria branch on Douglas Street Thursday during the lunch and dinner rush hours.

The four strikers, all non-union, were supported by a delegation of 30 members of Local 213 of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, in town to attend a meeting of the New Democratic Party caucus.

Waitress Mary Walker, 18, said four staff members at Denny's Broadway branch walked off the job Feb. 12 when attempts to discuss grievances with management proved unsuccessful.

Employees from other shifts joined the strikers and were also dismissed. All but two of the 16 employees are waitresses.

Denny's obtained an injunction Feb. 15 under Bill 43 which prevents employees picketing the Vancouver branch.

Parker said her group met the IBEW delegation by chance on the ferry. Delegates decided to skip lunch and walk the picket lines with the strikers before attending the NDP caucus.

Cliff Rundgren, assistant business manager for Local 213, said his union had supported the strikers in Vancouver.

"The girls are all non-union and some were fired for picketing," Rundgren said.

Parker said the strikers main complaint concerned a new rule at the Broadway Denny's which sets a 20-minute limit for customers who only order coffee.

She said that a lot of coffee customers are older men without families who drop in three or four times a day because they are lonely.

"We get to know them and yet we are supposed to tell them to get out after 20 minutes," she said.

Mike Kereiff, 19, a busboy, said he had no complaints until a new manager was appointed last November. Since then the 20-minute limit for coffee has been imposed. She also said the restaurant keeps running out of food.

"I think customers are entitled to relax," Kereiff said. "They should be regarded as people not just profit."

NO DECISION YET IN RIOT APPEAL

The B.C. Court of Appeal has reserved decision in the case of the Vancouver police officer disciplined as a result of the Gastown riot in August, 1971.

Constable John Whitelaw is appealing his demotion from first to second-class constable as ordered by the Vancouver Board of Police Commissioners in February, 1972.

At the one-day hearing only George Murray, counsel for Whitelaw, and Charles Fleming, counsel for the city of Vancouver, were present.

The constable was reduced in rank and pay following the Gastown incident which led to an investigation and harsh criticism of the manner in which police handled the crowds.

Whitelaw was charged under the police disciplinary code with four offences, including failure to administer first aid and filing false reports.

At a hearing before Police Chief John Fisk, Whitelaw was allowed to cross-examine witnesses but was not allowed the services of a lawyer.

He was found guilty and Fisk recommended his dismissal.

The police commission upheld the verdict but varied the punishment. Whitelaw was demoted instead of being dismissed.

Home Recipe Plan Takes Off Ugly Fat

It's simple how quickly one may lose pounds of unsightly fat right in your own home. Make this home recipe yourself. It's easy, no trouble at all and costs little. Just go to your drugstore and ask for Naran. Pour this into a pint bottle and add enough grapefruit juice to fill the bottle. Take two tablespoonsful twice a day as needed and follow the Naran Reducing Plan.

If your first purchase does not show you a simple easy way to lose bulky fat and help regain slender more graceful curves; if reducible pounds and inches of excess fat don't disappear from neck, chin, arms, abdomen, hips, calves and ankles just return the empty bottle for your money back. Follow this easy way endorsed by many who have tried this plan and help bring back alluring curves and graceful slenderness. Note how quickly bloat disappears—how much better you feel. More alive, youthful appearing and active.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

An 18-year-old who stripped a stolen car, then took it to an isolated road and tried to burn it, pleaded guilty to possession of stolen property in provincial court Thursday.

Robert Emil Miller, 2301 Victor, was remanded by Judge William Ostler to March 1 for pre-sentence report and sentence on the Oct. 10 Saanich charge.

Between that date and Jan. 29, a 1969 Buick was taken, first to a parking lot and later to a private garage and systematically stripped of its engine, transmission, a $1,000 two-way radio and an AM-FM radio.

Later in January, the car was taken to Prospect Lake Road and there was an unsuccessful attempt to incinerate the remains.

Miller, subsequently arrested by Saanich detectives, returned the car's two-way radio and some of its accessories.

James Leonard King, 923 Caledonia, was given a suspended sentence and placed on six month's probation after he was found guilty of wilful damage.

King was ordered to pay $25 in compensation.

Gregory Paul Wallace, 17, of 257 Hampton, was fined $15 for taking a pot-shot at a seagull. The .22 calibre bullet missed its intended victim, atop of Hampton school goalpost.

Instead, it went into the bathroom of a Seaton Street residence, where its occupant was painting the bathroom.

The accused man's frankness led Ostler to decide that a nominal fine would be adequate in this particular case of "discharging a rifle within the municipality of Saanich."

In traffic court, Judge Edmont St. Horre fined two persons $300 each for impaired driving.

Daniel Michael Curran, 29, of 1225 Glyn, apprehended Jan. 13 and Harry Robert Walker, 29, of 3882 Cedar Hill, stopped a week later, were the two involved.

RESOURCE CENTRE TO SERVE LIBRARIES

Provincial Secretary Ernie Hall said Wednesday a provincial resource centre to serve all British Columbia libraries will be set up by the Library Development Commission.

He told the legislature the provincial library in the Lagislature Buildings would also be up-graded.

R. L. Davidson, director of the commission, said the plan has four main features: a bibliographic centre, a union catalogue, a resource centre and a teletype network.

The bibliographic centre would process all requests for information from public libraries. The union catalogue would provide a record of all books in community libraries in the province.

Davidson said the resource centre would probably consist of the expanded facilities of the provincial library and archives, and a teletype network would connect the whole system.

A Junior Chamber of Commerce that will include both men and women in its ranks will be formed at Colwood.

The new "people unit" is being sponsored by the Victoria Junior Chamber of Commerce and will be open to people betwen 18 and 39.

A proposed charter date has been set at April 28.

In order to charter the unit will need 20 members, actively involved in two community-minded projects.

People enrolled prior to charter night will receive special charter membership.

The introduction of women into Jaycee units began in July, 1971, and has proven quite successful in Ontario and Quebec, although western province have been slow to accept the concept.

Jaycee units still have the option to remain all-male.

Nursing Program Set

A new School of Nursing program emphasizing preventive and primary care was approved Wednesday by the University of British Columbia senate.

The new program will be four years instead of the present five, and will stress behavior sciences over the hard sciences like physics and chemistry.

Aim of the program is to train nurses to work more on their own and less as assistants to doctors.

Schreyer Stresses Equality

WINNIPEG (CP) — The New Democratic Party government, in a speech from the throne stressing "greater equality of the human condition," Thursday proposed giving senior citizens exemption from health insurance premiums, along with low-cost care for them in nursing homes and extended treatment facilities.

The speech urged the legislature to give priority to the elderly, low-income groups and school and municipal budgets.

While promising no cuts in personal or corporate income taxes, the speech offered a number of programs to reduce property tax burden: a form of revenue-sharing for local governments, increased per-pupil grants to schools and more money to pay for law enforcement in small communities.

Sidney Spivak, leader of the 20-member Conservative Opposition and Liberal Leader I. H. Asper both praised proposals to ease health-care costs for the elderly but criticized other parts of the speech.

Spivak reiterated a plea for an across-the-board cut in income taxes, instead of the proposed selective tax relief measures.

Asper, whose party has four seats in the legislature, also urged a sharp reduction in personal taxes.

While endorsing some of the speech's social ideas, he found it "a failure as an economic document."

Among government proposals is one to bring home ownership to families of moderate income "who now are prevented from owning their own homes by high costs and often prohibitive mortgage rates."

RACE VIOLENCE CLAIMS DENIED

REGINA (CP) — Allegations of racial violence at the Regina correctional centre are not substantiated by an investigation, Social Services Minister Alex Taylor said Thursday.

Taylor told a news conference following receipt of a report that while there are some cases of violence they "are not so much racial in origin as individual personality clashes."

The investigation by Regina lawyer T. C. Zarzeczny was ordered following allegations by an unnamed youth that was beaten by native prisoners in April of 1972 as a result of racial conflict.

Janitors Vote

REGINA (CP) — The city's public school caretakers are to vote Sunday on a new contract. Approval could end nearly 14 months of contract negotiations.

Ken McEachern field representative for the Canadian Union of Public Employees, declined to disclose details of the agreement today, but said the union's executive recommended acceptance.

Talks Resume

SASKATOON (CP) — Negotiations began today and were scheduled to continue Friday in an attempt to avert strikes at three potash mines near Saskatoon. Officials say about 550 men who operate and repair mining equipment are affected by the negotiations. Contracts involving members of the United Steelworkers of America and the Potash Company of America and Noranda Mines Ltd. expired at the end of January.

Hours Cut Sought

EDMONTON (CP) — The Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers International Union will seek a major change in working conditions for 20,000 members in 1973 bargaining, national president Neil Reimer of Edmonton said today. Reimer said a 35-hour work week will be proposed when formal bargaining gets under way, based on a schedule of five consecutive days on and three off. In addition, the bargaining committee has agreed to seek a general wage increase of 12½ per cent on an average wage of about $5 an hour.

Dairy Purchased

REGINA (CP) — Saskatchewan Dairy Producers Co-Operative has purchased Regina City Dairy Ltd. The transaction reduces the number of dairies in the city to three.

Poor to 'Starve in Streets' Without Ottawa Help

OTTAWA (CP) — A Vancouver-area mother of seven, who cuts into her monthly $200 food budget to cover emergency expenses, quietly told the special Commons inquiry into rising food prices Thursday that it must act quickly or risk having "people starving to death in the streets."

Marjorie Hartling of Burnaby, head of the National Anti-Poverty Organization, said people living on today's welfare rates can daily afford little more than four soyaburgers — "they taste a little like beef" — if they are single, two boxes of Kraft dinner if they are a small family or two large cans of dog food if they live on a pension.

The dog food was the most nutritious, she said.

What's more, Mrs. Hartling told the 25-member committee, poorer people most heavily bear the brunt of rising food costs. The price of staple foods had risen more quickly than costs for luxury foods.

The anti-poverty organization, which has its headquarters in Mrs. Hartling's basement, represents about 1,000 poor peoples' groups and about 250,000 Canadians.

Vice-president of the group, Caroline Wahshee of Yellowknife, told the committee that food-price problems affect Northern natives even more seriously than poor people in the south.

The group also recommended that family allowance cheques be redistributed in such a way as to give more to poorer people; that a review board be set up to keep an eye on food prices; that all tariffs on food be eliminated; that incentives for bulk buying be stopped; that food be labelled according to nutritional content; that all Canadians have the right to a proper diet.

Mrs. Hartling said bulk buying discriminates against the poor who are unable to buy large quantities for lower prices because they have little ready cash. Few have deep freezes to store large food quantities.

"Free enterprise and competition no longer exists," she said. Big food-selling companies have "built a protective wall around themselves with bulk-buying" that must be eliminated.

'Forget Guilt' Ex-Addict Advises

NEW YORK (AP) — A former heroin addict who supported her habit as a prostitute advises parents to react immediately to a child's drug problem.

"At the very first sign that something's wrong, parents should seek professional help for their children; there's no time to feel guilty or worry what the neighbors will think," says Barbara Quinn, who grew from teen-age gang leader to community affairs worker in New York.

Mrs. Quinn works with the Addiction Services Agency of New York City, recruiting addicts off the streets, making speeches and developing programs to fight the drug problem.

She recently won an Emmy from the New York Television Academy for a cable television series she moderated called Drug Line.

The program, aimed at parents as well as the young, used junkies, pimps and prostitutes to talk about the drug scene in New York.

Said Mrs. Quinn:

"You have to nip the problem in the bud. I don't think kids are even ready to smoke marijuana. The young can't handle it, and if that's not available they'll soon be trying something else."

She noted several physical symptoms that should make parents suspicious that their children might be taking drugs.

"A very withdrawn child who suddenly becomes talkative, starts offering to help clean the house when he's never lifted a finger before, might be taking pills they call 'uppers.' If he seems sleepy and irritable most of the time, starts letting himself go physically, 'downers' might be the cause."

Parents should try to talk to their children about drugs, "but if there's never been any real communication between them, no kid is going to admit he's on drugs. And that's why professional help is the only answer."

As for her own experiences:

"I just didn't wake up one morning and become a dope fiend," said Mrs. Quinn, now 31, and married to her second husband, a jazz musician. She has a 14-year-old son.

"My insanity started when I was seven with the lying and the stealing and snowballed until it was out of control."

She talks easily now about a past that included several arrests, lesbian affairs, a hapless teen-age marriage, and years of prostitution.

As a teen gang leader called Cookie in the suburbs of New York City, her first arrest came at 14 for a sexual attack on another girl.

Her drug habit started with cough syrup.

"I was drinking five and six bottles a day. And then I tried heroin and I was hooked."

There wasn't enough money in purse-snatching and shoplifting to support her habit, so at 19 she moved in with a junkie in Harlem and turned to prostitution.

She spent 90 days in the Women's House of Detention — what she calls the most degrading experience of her life — but was back on the streets again.

"By now I weighed only 100 pounds. I'd lost most of my teeth, and was sick with a kidney infection . . . I knew I couldn't turn one more trick."

Throughout the years when she was broke and desperate, she would return home, but always managed to conceal her life style from her parents.

"I don't think they ever knew how sick I was, and if they did, they never wanted to admit to themselves that something was wrong."

She finally admitted all and begged them for help. Soon she was in a program of drug rehabilitation run by Synanon, a self-help organization, and began a 2½-year climb back to sanity.

"I don't regret my past. But I'd only do it over again if I knew I could end up the way I am now," says Mrs. Quinn.

CALLED COOKIE as a member of a teen gang in the suburbs of New York, Mrs. Barbara Quinn now talks easily about a past that includes several arrests, a hapless teen-age marriage, heroin addiction and years of prostitution. Now she is a community affairs worker in New York with Addiction Services Agency.

Overweight Can Add Years To a Woman's Appearance

This is the sixth in a series of 15 articles in which Josephine Lowman, author of Why Grow Old? and leading authority on health and beauty, tells you exactly what to do to lose 20 pounds in eight weeks. You may want to save these menus and exercises to refer back to during the eight-week period.

Beauty Improvement Plan

BY Josephine Lowman

I just received a letter from a reader who followed my eight-week Beauty Improvement Plan, beginning last August. She writes:

"Please send two Bip Kits to the enclosed addresses. I tried your plan and lost 20 pounds, along with 10 years. My friends saw the difference and are waiting anxiously to receive their kits."

It is so true that overweight makes a woman look much older than she is. Just as important, or more so, it makes her feel older. It affects her life in vital ways. Sometimes it leads to self-consciousness, chronic fatigue, and a sedentary life. The tendency is to lose interest in the way she looks because shopping for clothes is such a frustrating experience.

It is entirely possible for a loss of 20 pounds, or less, to subtract five to 10 years from a woman's appearance. You, too, can look 10 years younger eight weeks from now! I have seen it happen over and over again.

This is the sixth day of my eight week Beauty Improvement Plan. I have already called your attention to the fact that the easiest and most successful way to lose weight is to decrease your food intake moderately and increase your physical activity moderately. You can reduce your daily caloric intake by 500 or 600 by cutting out the trimmings (gravy, rich sauces and desserts, cream, pastries, candy, fried foods, potato chips and nuts, and so forth). Or, you can leave off one or two calorie-packed items such as a milk shake, 421 calories; one-sixth piece of apple pie, 377 calories; one-twelfth of a two-layer cake, 356 calories; one tablespoon of butter or margarine or mayonnaise, 100 calories; one carbonated drink, 106 calories, and so it goes. You see you do not have to starve!

Then add 500 or 600 calories, or even 300 daily, to your energy output. A brisk walk of an hour uses a little more than 300 calories.

MENUS

Breakfast

Orange — 1 medium chilled.

Baked egg — beat the white of one egg until you have a meringue. Spread the meringue on one piece lightly toasted whole wheat bread. Place egg yolk in center of meringue. Bake in oven at 350 degrees until meringue has set and egg is desired consistency. Serve garnished with salt, pepper, paprika, and one crumbled slice of cooked bacon.

Lunch

Western Sandwich — lightly toast one slice of whole wheat bread. Spread with one tsp. mayonnaise and prepared mustard to taste. Arrange a layer of sliced tomatoes on this (you may use one whole medium-sized tomato). Place a square of cheese (1-oz. slice) over this. Top with rings of sliced red onion. Dot with a bit more mustard. Broil under low heat until cheese is melted and bubbly.

Skim milk — one 8 oz glass.

Dinner

Veal Scallopine — saute a 4-oz. veal scallop (thin slice from leg) in 2 tsp. butter or margarine in teflon pan. Serve with lemon wedges and garnish with a generous amount of minced fresh parsley. Salt and pepper to taste.

Green beans — 1 cup cooked.

Skim milk — one 8 oz. glass.

Total Calories: 1,115

CHOOSE A SNACK OR DESSERT

UNIT A (85 calories or less).

1 medium orange
2 medium tangerines
1 cantaloupe
1 medium apple
½ medium grapefruit
2 peaches
½ cup fruit jello

Although this is the sixth day of Bip it is not too late to join the fun. If you want to lose from 15-20 pounds in the next eight weeks and missed the first part of this series you may want to send for my Bip kit which gives you complete directions plus menus for two more weeks, spot reducing exercises and a unique chart on which you can see your beauty line rise as your weight line drops.

If you would like to have this send 50 cents and a self-addressed, stamped, long envelope to Josephine Lowman in care of The Times, 2621 Douglas Street, Victoria.

Tomorrow: Gratifying rewards await woman who invests in self.

Dairies and Dentists Won't Stand Behind Fluoridation of Milk

By ANN DUNSMUIR
Times Staff

Dentists and dairies oppose Health Minister Dennis Cocke's suggestion Tuesday in the legislature that milk, instead of water, be fluoridated.

The dairies claim flouridated milk products would result in a public outcry and higher milk prices.

Dentists are disappointed because they prefer fluoridation of all water supplies as a public health measure.

"Low-income people can't afford milk but they get water," Dr. David Parfitt, director of dental services for the Greater Victoria school board, said Thursday.

Parfitt said he had hoped the government would change the Municipal Act so that water supplies could be fluoridated without a 60 per cent vote in favor of the measure.

"I'd like to see the government show more intestinal fortitude and take more of a stand," Parfitt said. "Fluoridation of milk is certainly a second-best method."

Dr. Eugene Kaellis, a local dentist who operates the Cool Aid clinic for low-income people, says fluoridation is "a necessity if there is going to be a dental health care program paid for by the province."

"If the opposition can stop fluoride in water they can stop it in milk," Kaellis said.

He suggested that the provincial government distribute fluoride tablets in the schools instead.

"Fluoridated milk would probably be more expensive and the poor, who don't get much milk in the first place, will get less."

Kaellis said the health minister should not give up the effort to flouridate water supplies.

"I don't know of any public health measure as successful and safe as fluoridation," he said.

"Dental disease is devastating," Kaellis said. "If people had the kind of lesions on their bodies that are concealed in the mouth the public would be convulsed with horror."

Reg Cottingham, manager of Island Farms Dairy — the only independent dairy in the Greater Victoria area — said he favors the present system which leaves fluoridation up to the individual. He doesn't think fluoridation would necessarily increase the cost of milk.

"Adding Vitamin D hasn't increased the cost," Cottingham said.

Spokesmen from four major British Columbia dairies said Wednesday in Vancouver they oppose the minister's suggestion.

George Okulitch, general manager for Dairyland, said that because milk is a natural food there would be a public outcry if fluorides were added.

"People these days are interested in natural foods," he said.

Bradley said costs of adding flourides to milk would be another consideration, and a line of fluoridated milk products would likely push all prices higher.

Seniors' Group Seeks Grant

All Odds Indicate a Lucky Year

elizabeth forbes

Get a few people sitting around in a relaxed atmosphere and it's amazing what the resulting conversation will turn up—and where it will lead.

For instance, the other evening, when friends of mine began talking of the significance to be found in odd and even numbers.

It started lazily enough with the idea that certain years—certain months, even certain days—were luckier than others.

Then someone made it clear that certain numbers were luck pieces as far as she was concerned.

This brought a chuckle from a woman beside me, who offered the information that when she was a girl in Pictou County, Nova Scotia, "we did a lot of playing around with numbers—and always it was the odd ones that were lucky."

She then added "this year of 1973 should be extremely lucky—just look at it's odd numbers."

It was inevitable during the next few minutes that good or bad luck—not only in numbers but in charms and potents—would hold the floor.

We reached back into our grandparents' days. We dragged out myths and beliefs we had heard from them and had almost forgotten over the years.

"I wonder if anyone goes hunting four-leaved clovers now?" questioned the one who lived her young years in Ontario.

"My grandmother never crossed a field without searching for that kind of luck—and we are still finding her clover leaves, carefully preserved in books she once owned."

Horseshoes were lucky too, a quiet voice suggested. She remembered seeing them suspended over the door of her grandparents' home—for luck.

That was a relic of a degraded form of pagan worship originating among the Arabs of North Africa, someone pointed out.

"There was no pagan worship at my grandparents' place," came back the answer. "They were good Presbyterians."

The old belief about the new moon came up. The one about seeing it first out of doors and immediately turning over any money you might have in pocket or purse—for luck.

We talked of bad luck, too. Bad luck to open an umbrella in the house. Bad luck to cut your fingernails on Sunday, to kill a spider that crawls on you, to leave a knife on the table overnight.

One in the group remembered an aunt who would never hold a loaf of bread upside down while cutting it. That was bad luck.

Another thought of her mother's belief that to break a mirror brought seven years bad luck. Someone else remembered that is is bad luck to spill salt . . . also to counteract the effect some of the spilled salt must be burned or quickly thrown over the left shoulder.

By then we were all laughing and memories of "old wives' tales" were coming thick and fast.

Right down to the one about not presenting a person with anything that is pointed, such as a knife, brooch or pin, without getting, in return, a penny in token of payment.

If you don't get the penny, and you do present the something pointed, it will lead to a quarrel. "Sure as fate!"

Just at that moment, the serious-minded one amongst us said it was good to laugh, as we were doing, at the old-time sayings and myths. But we should also rememer they were—along with old songs, traditions and customs—a part of our folklore.

A folklore that reached back to many lands. A folklore that came to Canada with our grandparents and our great-grandparents, when they pioneered in this country, long ago.

Pediatrician Fears Harm Done by Working Moms

NEW YORK (UPI) — "Society will pay for the working mother — pay in terms of family relationships, in terms of what the child grows up to be.

"The worst mother is better than the best nurse." These views belong to Dr. Arnaldo Rascovsky, a Buenos Aires pediatrician and psychiatrist, who organized and heads an international organization to protect children.

Rascovsky takes the stand in the face of what's already happened in North America. Working mothers are 38 per cent of all the women in the U.S. labor force, 10.6 million of them with children under 18 of whom 4.1 million are under six years. The statistics are from the women's bureau, U.S. department of labor.

But around the world, the working mother is pretty much taken for granted.

"Everything that separates the mother from the child is risking the future," Rascovsky contends. "I have a saying that the most important days for a baby are the first day, the first month, the first year, the first two years.

"Anything that separates the two in the early days is damaging."

Accordingly, Rascovsky scores the hospitals who immediately separate mother and child at delivery and put the infant in nursery for a few days at a time when "the child needs the closest contact with the mother."

The relationship should not be interrupted with another child for at least 18 months, he believes. But as for abortion, the doctor takes no stand except that "the best way is to develop good contraceptives."

He has no big quarrel with the mother who returns to an outside job after the children are older. The important thing, he said, is that there is parental unity during the early years. Without it, one result can be the anti-social behaviorists — the schizophrenic, the depressive, the alcoholic, the pervert, and yes the war-maker.

Rascovsky, father of two and grandfather of four, was interviewed while on a trip to New York to activate a chapter of Filium.

Filium, which he started in Buenos Aires about two years ago, has as its purpose the study and prevention of filicide, literally murder of one's child.

But the organization broadens the definition to "destruction of our children, not only through slaughter and war, but by more subtle mechanisms such as neglect, denigration, mistreatment and mutilation.

"The battered child is an obvious example. Abandonment is one of the most pernicious forms of filicide. Social institutions such as the orphanage, the nursery, the school, the university may also contribute . . ."

Rascovsky says the organization is supported by donation, is non-political, and members include psychologists, psychiatrists, lawyers, "very good" parents among others.

In its brief years, it has branched through most Latin American nations, he said, through Western Europe and into Romania and Yugoslavia, as well as into the United States. Filium will hold its first international congress in Paris July 20-21.

Rascovsky, a pediatrician for 25 years, branched into the study of psychiatry, neurology, endocrinology and psychology from his work with his small patients.

Increasingly he delved into parent-child relationships and why they became what they were — "you can't treat the child unless you treat the parent."

He founded the Argentine Psychological Institute, has lectured internationally, and written several books and papers on filicide — its history and causes.

"The aspects of filicide throughout the world are terrible," said the physician.

Dental Guide Printed For Unwary Patients

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) — Six million teeth are pulled unnecessarily each year, Pennsylvania Insurance Commissioner Herbert Denenberg said Thursday in issuing "32 rules on how to keep your 32 teeth — or however many you may have left."

"If a physician wanted to take off a finger or a toe, you'd think twice," he said. "But many people don't bat an eye when a dentist starts extracting teeth."

At least 15 per cent of all dentists are incompetent or dishonest, said Denenberg.

"Quality review of dental care is worse than that of medical care, and there is still no requirement in Pennsylvania or most states for continuing education," he added. "In addition, the dentists' official code of ethics actually makes it unethical for a dentist to criticize the bad work of his colleagues."

Schoolteachers Told 'First Names Count'

WINNIPEG (CP) — A teacher must know his students' first names if the teacher-student relationship in schools is to become more congenial, a Grade 11 student told 400 Manitoba public school teachers and administrators Wednesday.

Speaking in a panel discussion on interpersonal relationships in schools, student Carmello Milateno said it was not unusual in many large high schools for a teacher not to know a student's first name.

"Learning a student's name is very important," he said. "It makes him feel like a person — not just a body with locker number 282.

Milateno said students are astounded if a teacher makes any attempt to relate on a personal level.

"Most students feel teachers don't give a damn, and that they are being channelled through a stystem and come out with a stamp on their forehead saying they've got a Grade 12 certificate."

Another panelist, Keith Cooper, assistant superintendent of Winnipeg schools, said teachers "must decide whether they want a system which is comfortable and geared to administrative convenience or whether they want a system where children are free to explore and learn."

Check Handicap for Cure

DEAR ABBY: I have a young son with a slight speech problem about which the other kids tease him unmercifully. These are the same kids who tease other kids who happen to have a funny nose or something else that God put there and is beyond their control.

Now I ask you, who is the one with the problem? Kids can be the cruellest lot in the world. Abby, please print this letter and if just one person will quit teasing handicapped children, it will be worth it.—Mother.

DEAR MOTHER: I'll print your letter, and with it some advice for mothers of children with "slight speech problems," funny noses and something else that God put there and is beyond their control."

A child may be born with (or develop) a handicap, which may not be "beyond control." There are speech therapists who can help children (and adults) to overcome speech problems. And people with "funny noses" and birth blemishes need not go through life hating their handicaps and suffering ridicule because of them. Don't assume that all handicaps must be accepted and lived with. We are living in an age of medical miracles! Your family doctor can make helpful recommendations.

DEAR ABBY: I am in a dilemma and need an outside opinion. My husband and I received an invitation to a high society wedding. We have two married daughters, Judy and Rosalie. Judy, who had a much better marriage than her sister, received an invitation to this wedding, but Rosalie did not.

My husband and I would really like to go, but I don't think we should when one of our daughters was slighted in this manner. Judy says that accepting or declining an invitation should have nothing to do with who else was invited and who wasn't, but as a mother, I see it differently.

My husband agrees with Judy. I think we should all stay home. What do you think?—A Mother's Heart.

DEAR HEART: I agree with Judy, too. In any case, you and your husband may accept or decline only for yourselves. And your married daughter has the same privilege.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Forecast for Saturday, Feb. 24
By SYDNEY OMARR

Actor Robert Mitchum, a Leo, once wrote astological talks, was very much concerned with the subject, exemplifies many qualities of his zodiacal sign. Mae West is another Leo who typifies the characteristics of her sign. She is active in psychical research and knowledgeable about astrology.

ARIES (March 21 - April 19): Accent is on publishing, advertising, greater ability to communicate. Get finger on pulse of public. Move with the times. Cancer individual plays key role. Open lines which connect to those who have something to say.

TAURUS (April 20 - May 20): One who advocates that you expand too quickly is to be ignored. Key now is to strive for balance, especially where financial statements enter picture. Ask questions. Get an accounting. Clarify information related to legacy, special agreement.

GEMINI (May 21 - June 20): Go slow — be thorough enough to check apparent minor matters. Read between the lines, especially where contracts are concerned. Obtain valid hint from Taurus message. Partnership, marriage are accented.

CANCER (June 21 - July 22): Be prepared for change, travel, variety, intensified relationships. Don't be satisfied merely that something occurred. Find out why it happened. Emphasis is on work, health, co-operation with one who shares your interests.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 - Sept. 22): What appears nebulous may actually have substance. Know it and do some additional checking. Take nothing for granted. Be receptive to Pisces person. Accent is on home, end of matter, family affair which has been neglected.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 - Oct. 22): Ideas prove valuable. Express yourself. Be versatile without scattering efforts in too many directions. Sagittarian could aid. Short trip could be on agenda. Relative confides money question. Don't become inextricably involved.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 - Nov. 21): Finish project in spite of secret fear, doubt. Emphasis is on collecting what you need. Assets are available. Get message across to more persons. Review distribution procedures. Aries may have new, productive way.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 - Dec. 21): Co-operate with Libra. Welcome new contacts, friends. Your special abilities grab spotlight. Timing is on target, new project should be promoted, encouraged. Come out of shell; draw attention to yourself.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 - Jan. 19): Look behind scenes for answers. Clandestine meeting could be featured. Confide in one who has experience. Don't try to go it alone. Co-operate, efforts now are more likely to succeed. Money situation better than you might realize.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 - Feb. 18): Accent on romance, creativity, fulfillment of some major hopes and wishes. Pleasure is keynoted. Leave details for another time. Perceive situation as a whole. Don't be discouraged by one who constantly frets.

PISCES (Feb. 19 - March 20): Get rid of nonessentials. Be direct. Go to source. Accept responsibility. Prestige is on upgrade. You have allies in high places. Know it and be confident. Insist on facts. Refuse to accept evasive answers.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you have unusual voice, dramatic ability, attachment to family and the sensitivity necessary to perceive what others really feel. New project this year will be successful — July will be your most significant month of 1973.

Whoever you are and wherever you live, you can play an important part in furthering international development!

You may also want to know how our country assists developing nations. "International Development—Foreign Policy for Canadians," a 24-page booklet, outlines Canada's policy in this field.

It points out that it has become increasingly clear that many problems now facing mankind, such as the population explosion, environmental problems and technological changes, can no longer be dealt with solely on a national basis.

The six-page folder "What Can You Do to Help the Developing Countries?" lists some of the steps you, your school, your club, your business and your community can take to make this a better world.

You could subscribe to a magazine from a developing nation or vacation in such a country. If you are in business, you could invest in a less developed country. And if you belong to a club you could invite a student from a low-income country to address one of your meetings.

For either publication send your request to: Information Division, Canadian International Development Agency, 122 Bank Street, Ottawa, Ontario K1A OG4. Please allow at least two to three weeks for delivery.

Vets' Pension Hike Rushed

OTTAWA (CP) — To the surprise of watching veterans, a Commons committee rapidly gave unanimous approval Thursday to a veterans-pension scheme which would increase payments and link them to a rising standard of living.

"Incredible," said one representative of the Royal Canadian Legion as the veterans affairs committee took only a couple of hours to approve about a 20 per cent increase in pensions.

In so doing the committee approved a system under which the pensions would be linked with the after-tax take-home pay of a composite group of unskilled public servants.

And in an unprecedented step, the committee approved a system under which pensions would increase by the same amount as the wages of that group.

Only last year Parliament linked veterans pensions to the cost-of-living index but this new system, which committee members expect the government to adopt, goes farther.

Speakers at the meeting said that while the cost of living index may rise about three per cent in a year the standard of living of these public employees might go up six per cent.

Veterans Affairs Minister Daniel MacDonald, expected to press for the changes in cabinet, said linking veterans pensions to the standard of living does not mean that the government accepts the same principle for other pensions.

Stanley Knowles (NDP—Winnipeg North Centre), a pensions authority who has long sought the change, said, however, he will continue to work to have it applied to all other pensions.

He said he was "ecstatic" over a report drawn up by representatives of the pension commission, veterans affairs and veterans association.

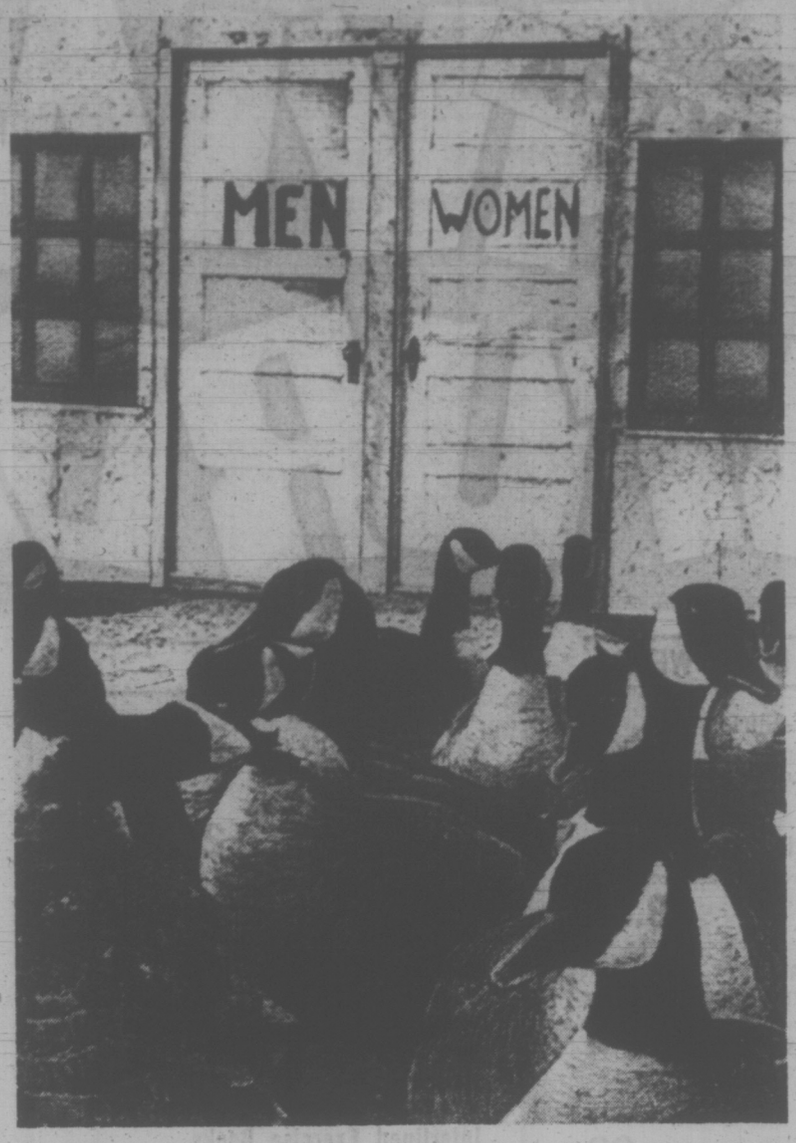
Representatives of the Conservative and Liberal parties also praised it and all agreed that the committee should report its recommendation for acceptance of the scheme to the Commons today so that the government can start work on legislation.

All expressed hope that the increased pensions can be paid by April 1.

Robert Semillie of Winnipeg, Dominion president of the Royal Canadian Legion, said the rapid action by the committee was "heartwarming."

He said he wished all veterans could be here to watch.

Under the scheme the pension of a single man with a 100 per cent disability would increase to more than $4,500 a The pension is not subject to income tax.



WAITING . . . for spring, these Canada geese are part of a flock of 72 who appear to be in line for the doors behind them as they sun themselves in a pen near Broadview, Sask. They are part of a breeding project sponsored by the Saskatchewan Wildlife Federation.

SC Bid Against Grits Fails

OTTAWA (CP) — An attempt by Social Credit to topple the minority Liberal government was easily blocked Thursday night by an alliance of all other parties in the Commons.

A phalanx of 236 Liberal, Conservative and NDP members easily subdued the 13 Social Credit members in the House, crushing their sub-amendment to a government motion asking the Commons to accept the federal budget for 1973-74 presented Monday.

Its passage would have altered a Conservative non-confidence amendment that comes to a vote Monday. The main motion will be voted on Wednesday.

A defeat on the budget would topple the government, but the New Democratic Party, with the balance of power in the House, has indicated it will support the government.

The Liberals have 109 seats, the Conservatives 107, NDP 31, Social Credit 15, and there are two independent members.

On Thursday, second day of the six-day debate on the budget, the Conservatives loosed their fiercer critics.

Financial critic James Gillies (Toronto Don Valley) described the shortcomings he sees in the budget and how the Conservatives would do it better.

Liberal economic policies are "not in touch with what is happening in the world," he said. "This budget could have been written in 1952 or 1962 or 1972."

The budget is intended to stimulate the economy by increased foreign trade, investment and inventory buildup, Gillies said. But the growth of trade blocs, tariffs and most importantly the devaluation of the U.S. dollar made it total folly to depend upon increased trade to reduce unemployment.

A Conservative government would have presented a "substantially more expansionary" budget, planned for a deficit at least double the liberal figure of $975 million and established a 60-to-90-day wage and price freeze so it could devise an economic stabilization program.

Howard Grafftey (PC—Brome Missisquoi) said the budget, by neglecting provincial needs, will force an increase in provincial taxes.

Shippers Unscrupulous Management Group Told

HARRISON HOT SPRINGS (CP) — Management in the shipping industry was described Thursday as an unscrupulous, profit-hungry dictatorship with little concern for either the public or workers.

Louis Kaufman, president of the International Longshoreman's and Warehouseman's Union, local 500, Vancouver, made the charges at the annual conference of the Industrial Relations Management Association.

"Unions must, as a public service, insist that management relinquish what they believe to be their sole and divine right to institute revolutionary changes on an ever-increasing basis, without concern for, or consultation with all the people who are adversely affected," said Kaufman.

Kaufman said that the common view of unions as being tremendously large and rich is mythical.

"Workmen on this continent are just beginning to rise above the arena of the historical master-servant relationship, but not without fierce opposition from management and to some extent, the older members of the labor market," he said.

Pollution Trials Set

COQUITLAM (CP) — Three Coquitlam companies have pleaded not guilty to charges of polluting the Coquitlam River. Jack Cewe Ltd. and Allard Contractors will be tried May 29. Johnson Trucking will be tried May 22.

Addict Jailed

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — Dennis Roy Lilley, 27, an admitted heroin addict, was sentenced Thursday to six years in the British Columbia Penitentiary after he was convicted on a charge of possession of heroin for the purpose of trafficking. He was arrested in the bus depot here. He admitted he brought heroin from Vancouver.

Wolves Safe

BURNS LAKE (CP) — Roger Goodlad, northern regional wildlife supervisor, said Thursday no measures will be taken to curb wolves in this area. Ranchers have complained they are losing cattle to wolves. Doodiad said ranchers must give documented proof of wolf attacks.

Beach Fouled

WHITE ROCK (CP) — Mrs. Kathleen Thomas said that an analaysis of sludge that appears on the beach outside her home after heavy rainfalls indicates that the material contains human waste matter, paper and bacteria. Mrs. Thomas said that she has tried repeatedly to draw the situation to the attention of city authorities, but no avail

Wife Also Guilty

VANCOUVER (CP) — The wife of a man recently sentenced to life in prison for drug trafficking pleaded guilty Thursdy to the same offence in provincial court.

Christine Walker, 19, was remanded to April 24 for sentencing. She is also known as Christine Orlovic, wife of 37-year-old Walter Orjovich, now serving a life term.

GRANTS AID FRENCH STUDENTS

About 50 Victoria area students are expected to be given government bursaries to attend the University of Victoria's seven-week Maison Francaise immersion French course which starts July 3.

They will be among more than 4,500 post-secondary students from across Canada who will take part in six- to seven-week immersion courses this summer to familiarize themselves with their second language.

The University of British Columbia will hold two six-week immersion courses during the summer. All other provinces are also participating.

An agreement on the summer language bursary program was signed Tuesday in Ottawa by State Secretary Hugh Faulkner and Dr. Maurice Richer, secretary-general of the council of ministers of education.

The program began three years ago with 1,200 students participating. This year it will cost $2.8 million to provide tuition, room and board for the 4,500 students.

Students may travel to other provinces to take the courses, but must pay all travelling expenses themselves.

Applications and information about the bursary program will be available from the student services branch, post-secondary education, department of education in a couple of weeks.

8 CARDS OF THANKS

I wish to express my sincere thanks and appreciation to my many dear friends, neighbors and relatives for their beautiful floral tributes, cards and acts of kindness during my sudden loss of my dear wife, Marjorie Ann (Dickie) Crystal. Special thanks to Drs. L. Bapty and Perera. Rev. B. Molloy, Stan Martin, nurses, orderlies and pallbearers. — J. E. (Curly) Crystal.

The Municipal Chapter of Victoria I.O.D.E. wish to express their appreciation and thanks to the Mayor of the City of Victoria and to the Mayors of the surrounding municipalities of Oak Bay, Saanich and Esquimalt for proclaiming the week of February 11-17 as I.O.D.E. week in the Greater Victoria area.

We wish to express our sincere thanks to all our friends and neighbors for their kind expressions of sympathy and beautiful floral tributes at the passing of our beloved husband and father, William Magee. Special thanks to the nurses of the Royal Jubilee Hospital and to Dr. J. Flanagan. — Cathy and Colin Magee.

8 CARDS OF THANKS

We wish to convey our gratitude and heartfelt thanks to our many wonderful friends and relatives for their sincere kindness and expressions of sympathy during our sudden loss of our beloved husband and father Keith MacFarlane. Our special thanks to Dr. Ireland and Rev. Harry Pike for his wonderful service. Also our thanks to the pallbearers and the beautiful floral tributes from our friends and relatives.
Fondly remembered and sadly missed by his loving wife Freda, daughter Cherie, son Grant, wife Judy and Family.

The gratitude in our hearts can never be fully expressed, but we want our friends, relatives and neighbors to know how much their kind words, expressions of sympathy and beautiful floral tributes have meant to us during our recent time of sorrow in the sad loss of our husband, father and grandfather, Lee Jop. Special thanks to Dr. J. R. Flanagan and the nurses and staff of the Victoria General Hospital, the Gorge Road Hospital and the Chinese Hospital. — Mrs. Lee and Family.

We wish to express our sincere appreciation to all our friends whose many acts of kindness and sympathy during our recent loss of mother and sister, Gertrude R. Clink, were of great comfort to us. Special thanks to Dr. Woodwark, Dr. Whitley and staff of the Royal Jubilee Hospital, and to Rev. P. Ross and Rev. W. E. Greenhalgh. — The Clink family and Cecilia Simpson.

We wish to express our sincere thanks and appreciation to our many dear friends, neighbors, and relatives for their beautiful floral tributes, cards and acts of kindness during our sudden loss of our dear sister Marjorie Ann (Dickie) Crystal. Special thanks to Drs. L. Bapty, and Perera. Rev. B. Molloy, Stan Martin, nurses, orderlies and pallbearers. — Brothers and sisters.

We wish to extend our sincere thanks for the many messages of sympathy from our family and friends, in memory of our dear son Travis La-Roy Helmers. Special thanks to Dr. L. E. Horne and the kindness of the Royal Jubilee Maternity Staff.—Elizabeth and Larry Helmers.

TEACH IN CANADA'S ARCTIC NORTHWEST TERRITORIES
POSITIONS AVAILABLE commencing August and September 1973.

The Northwest Territories Department of Education will require teachers to fill positions in schools with one to fifty teachers. Major requirements will be for primary and intermediate teachers willing to live and work in small isolated northern communities. For larger communities, a small number of elementary, secondary school and specialist teachers will be required.

In addition to regular teaching duties, teachers will have challenging opportunities to provide leadership and service in a variety of community activities and adult education programs.

REQUIRED QUALIFICATIONS
—A valid Canadian teaching certificate.
—Preferably some successful teaching experience in field related to position desired.

TERMS OF EMPLOYMENT
—All offers of employment are subject to teachers and dependents passing a medical examination.
—On appointment, transportation costs are paid from place of recruitment to place of employment in the Territories. Return transportation costs are paid on separation only after the completion of a complete academic year in which the resignation becomes effective.
—Housing with basic furniture, provided at reasonable cost to the head of the household.
—Food rations supplied at cost, on request, during first year in the north in communities where there are no commercial suppliers.
—Pension Plan, Northwest Territories Health Care Plan, Group Surgical-Medical Plan, Compulsory Disability Insurance, and other benefits.

SALARY SCALE—the 1973-74 salary scale is presented below.

Level	Minimum	Maximum

UGANDA RECRUITING U.S. PROFESSIONALS

SAN FRANCISCO (Reuter) — A 10-man delegation from Uganda has begun recruiting United States workers, white and black, to replace some of the Asian and British residents recently expelled by President Idi Mamin.

The Ugandans are looking for doctors, secondary school teachers, engineers, metallurgists, chemical workers and sugar technologists. They need about 250 workers.

Petain Returned To Lonely Tomb

PARIS (AP) — A military plane returned the flag-draped coffin of Marshal Philippe Petain to his traitor's tomb on a lonely island off the Atlantic Coast Thursday even though it may cost the French government right-wing control of the National Assembly elections next month.

The coffin was found Wednesday night in a garage in a northern suburb of Paris. It had been left there by a group of rightists who stole it from the Ile d'Yeu Sunday, hoping to force the government to bury it in the national military cemetery at Douaumont with the other defenders in the First World War Battle of Verdun.

Police are holding at least six men suspected of complicity in the plot, including Herbert Massol, an ultra-rightist candidate for the assembly, and Francois Boux de Cassan, a minister of information in Petain's Vichy government.

Jacques Isorni, Petain's lawyer at his treason trial, accused President Georges Pompidou's government of getting the marshal's remains back by duplicity. He said the government had intimated to Petainist circles that, when the coffin was found, "it would be placed in a location of honor while the family decided on the location of the grave."

"It was a deliberately false indication."

Although Petain was convicted of treason for his collaboration with the Nazis after the French surrender in the Second World War, a sizable rightist faction has for years demanded that his body be transferred from the island of exile where he died and that he lie among the men he led at Verdun. But a burial with honors for Petain would antagonize the many Frenchmen for whom the wounds of the Vichy era are still open.

MAY SAVE VOTES

In returning the body to the island, the Gaullist government probably chose the lesser evil. The Petainists it angered are not likely to vote for the Communist-Socialist coalition that is the government's biggest threat in the election. But concessions to the Petainists might have driven some of the anti-Petain voters to the leftists.

Massol, 36, said that he organized the theft of the body.

Police said the zinc-lined, oak coffin, weighing more than 1,750 pounds, was put in a rented truck after it was taken from the tomb on the island, ferried to the mainland early Monday morning and transported to Paris. The newspaper France Soir said it was to have been taken to Douaumont but "political arguments and logistics" intervened.

Chief Is Brand New Canadian

After 60 years, Jimmy Sewid, fifth-generation hereditary chief of the Nimpkish Indian tribe at Alert Bay, has been officially recognized as a Canadian.

He's not exactly jumping with joy.

A noted author and historian and recipient of the Order of Canada, Sewid was refused a passport six weeks ago because he couldn't produce a birth certificate.

"I was born 60 years ago behind a barn in a tent, near Alert Bay," he says, "They didn't keep birth records on the reserve in those days."

The Vancouver Indian affairs department contacted Ottawa, producing "a whole pile of papers" proving Sewid was born in Alert Bay and that his great-great-grandfather was chief of the tribe.

They told him to apply for citizenship papers.

Sewid did and received the official papers. Using them he was given the passport he needs for a holiday in France.

"Now I'm a brand new Canadian," he says.

C. F. Milnes, officer in charge of the Victoria citizenship branch, concedes that governments are not particularly sensitive to people's feelings.

"I guess governments don't do things gently," he says.

Sewid observes:

"You know, when the white man first came to my people, they told us they wanted us to be like them. Now they don't even recognize us as citizens unless we apply for citizenship.

"I wouldn't lower myself as an Indian to scream and protest about it."

CLAMPS URGED IN FUR TRADE

Several leading biologists today urged the federal government to ban trafficking in endangered animal skins — a practice which threatens the extinction of hundreds of animals in the world.

Dr. James Hatter, director of the B.C. Fish and Wildlife branch, expressed surprise that the federal government has done nothing to stop selling operations of endangered animal skins.

"It is about time we followed the example of other countries," he said.

He was commenting on an announcement by the U.S. justice and interior departments Thursday that hundreds of endangered animal skins were seized aboard an aircraft at Kennedy airport. The skins were being shipped to Canada.

The U.S. prohibits the sale and transport of skins of animals which are threatened with extinction.

The justice department said the skins were being taken to storehouses in Canada which does not prohibit the trafficking in endangered animal skins.

Dr. Bristol Foster, director of the Provincial Museum, said regulations to stop this type of operation is long overdue.

David Stirling, a member of World Wildlife Fund, said the lack of action to protect endangered animal species reflected "the holier than thou attitude of Canadians."

"We are always ready to condem other nations, especially the United States," he said. "But we never take the lead to protect the world's environment including our own.

"On Vancouver Island, the wolf is an endangered species —it differs from the mainland type," he said. "But we still allow people to poison the animal."

The skin seized in the United States included those of ocelots, jaguars, pumas, marguays and giant otters.

He said the affluent nations are responsible for illegal animal fur-selling operations.

"People want to ware skins of endangerd animals because they are rare," he said. "It is a status symbol and thousands of such skins are shipped to West Germany.

He noted that the maximum penalty in the United States for dealing, buying or selling endangered animal skins is $10,000.

Council Douses Firemen's Bid for Conference Cash

A stylish convention of Canadian fire chiefs will not be partly financed by the city of Victoria to the tune of $1,952.

City council denied the outright grant Thursday.

"I don't mind helping them out for a lunch but to underwrite the whole thing is ridiculous," commented Ald. Tom Christie reading off a list of convention events which included a $150 tea with crumpets.

Total cost of the affair was to be $4,834, payable by the members of Greater Victoria Intermunicipal Committee.

Council was told a registration fee was being charged, but revenue would go to the fire chiefs' association.

"Isn't that just ducky," said Ald. Christie.

City fire chief Eric Simmons would not comment today, although he said he did not think the convention would have to be called off.

In other business:

Council agreed to refer to the James Bay draft study (February 1973) as a preliminary study in dialogue with the public, although Ald. Sam Bawlf pointed out that by-laws to enforce central parts of the study are currently in preparation.

Council decided to withhold its $1,522 annual bill for the Canadian Federation of Mayors and Municipalities until the federation submitted a financial statement. Dues are based on population.

Council approved expenditure of $20,500 for consultants and expenses in studies of the proposed Government and View traffic-free mall.

Appeal Continuing On Elevator Ruling

The appeal, which began Thursday, is being heard by Mr. Justice Bruce Robertson, Mr. Justice Nathan Nemetz and Mr. Justice H. W. Davey.

The Supreme Court held that the International Union of Elevator Constructors, on strike since Sept. 8, violated B.C. labor law by proposing in a new contract that strike or lockout action be permitted if technological changes were not being followed.

The Supreme Court held that the union insisted on the new clause being in a new contract before general negotiations could continue, meaning that there had been no collective bargaining.

B. B. Trevino, representing elevator companies, told the B.C. Appeal Court today the old contract had a clause of doubtful legality but the proposal in negotiations put it beyond doubt.

Mr. Justice Nemetz observed that the employers continued to bargain with illegal clauses on the table.

Esquimalt Candidates

Two candidates have filed nomination papers to fill the seat on Esquimalt council left vacant by the death of Ald. Art Cuthbert.

Conrad Lundgren, a 29-year-old machinist at HMC Dockyard, is running again, after an uncuccessful bid for a seat in last fall's election. He lives at 635 Admirals Rd.

Mrs. Ada Barnes of 1137 Bewdley, a 66-year-old housewife, is also making her second try. She ran for a seat in the 1970 elections.

Nominations close at noon Monday, Feb. 26, and the election will be March 10.

Terra Nova In Hong Kong

OTTAWA (CP) — The destroyer escort Terra Nova, which left Victoria Jan. 29 to serve as a possible escape route for Canadian observers in Vietnam, arrived in Hong Kong Thursday.

A Canadian Forces spokesman said the ship will likely remain there until Monday taking on supplies and then head for Singapore and the Philippines.

IT ONLY HURTS WHEN THEY STOP

KITCHENER, Ont. (CP) — Police still were scratching their heads today after reading one of this week's traffic reports.

Noticing a car being driven erratically by three youths, they stopped it and, after questioning the driver, opened the trunk.

There was an elderly man tied with a leather strap to an inner tube and a cushion.

Kidnapping? No. The man told the constables he suffered from severe arthritis and he had paid the youths to tie him in the trunk of the car twice a week and then drive over rough roads.

He said it "works every time" to relieve his arthritic pain.

Hospital Pact Signed

Health Sciences Association and the B.C. Hospitals Association have agreed on a two-year contract providing a 7¼ per cent wage increase in each year, it was announced Thursday.

Results of ratification votes are expected in four weeks. HSA represents 1,400 paramedical workers, including those at Victoria General, Gorge Road, St. Mary's Priory and Mount St. Mary, an association official said.

Order to Give $2,000 Cheque To Heart Fund

Delegates from Britain, the United States and Australia as well as Canada are expected to attend an international convention of the Order of the Amaranthe March 2 and 3 in the Emrpses Hotel.

In opening ceremonies for the convention, a cheque for more than $2,000 will be presented to a represenative of the British Columbia Heart Foundation from the local Order of the Amaranthe.

The money has been raised by the group's 200 members through teas, luncheons and sales, said grand royal matron of the organization Mrs. Katie Wells.

Gulf Islands Study Ordered

The legislature's standing committee on municipal matters will study future development of the Gulf Islands after a motion passed in the house Thursday.

The motion, moved by Municipal Affairs Minister Jim Lorimer, calls for the standing committee "to inquire into the question of the future development, including the development of community plans, on the Gulf Islands and such other islands in the vicinity as the committee may consider appropriate."

The study should include examination of existing sections of the Municipal Act and other acts with a view to recommending changes if necessary.

Hearings may be held on the islands if considered necessary and any persons, papers and records called for will be required to testify.

'He's Forgotten' —Oppel's Father

COURTENAY (UPI) — The father of a Vancouver Island missionary being held as a prisoner of war in southeast Asia said Thursday that his son had become "the forgotten man" of the post-Vietnam war operations.

Magnus Oppel, a retired logger who lives here with his wife, Phyllis, learned three weeks ago that his son was alive and a PoW in Laos.

Lloyd Oppel, 21, was captured by the Communists last Oct. 28 while working for an organization called the Christian Mission from Many Lands.

Last week, another Canadian PoW, Marc Cayer, was freed by the North Vietnamese and returned home to Quebec on Tuesday.

"We're happy for Marc," Oppel said, "but we thought both of them would come home together."

Since Feb. 1, when External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp told the Oppels that their son was safe, they have had no word from the Canadian government.

"I think Lloyd's the forgotten man as far as our government is concerned," Oppel said. "We have all those troops over there and can't get any word on him."

Oppel said he and his wife have huddled around the television and radio every day in hope of hearing news of their son. But all they've seen is smiling American PoWs streaming off airplanes in the Philippines and in California.

Oppel also said Sharp told him to stay near the telephone, where, Oppel said, he has remained for the past 20 days.

"We know he's alive — that's all," Oppel said.

He added: "He'll come home when the Lord is ready to bring him home. We haven't lost our faith in the Lord."

PROTEST FIZZLES

GLENORA — Construction of the Cowichan Airport Society airstrip here has resumed after a brief interruption Thursday morning when 15 placard-carrying housewives stood in the path of two oncoming bulldozers in an attempt to halt development.

Society president Jim Painter said this morning the airstrip in this small rural community near Duncan should be ready by Saturday.

The society, he said, had contacted police Thursday morning after the demonstrators — who said they represent almost all area residents — defied a security guard and stopped the construction machines.

Staff-Sergeant Herb Knopf talked with the protestors who returned home after discussing it among themselves.

Spokesman for the protesters, Mrs. Shirley Stewart, said Glenora residents did not want the quiet of the area destroyed by the inevitable noise of an airport, and referred to it as a "pleasure of the few."

"We don't want an airport here — it's a rural area and we intend to keep it rural."

She said the airport society was directed by the regional board to contact the local residents and get their opinion on the planned airstrip.

Stupich Role Affirmed

NANAIMO (CP) — Bruce Meikle of Nanaimo, president of A and B Homes Ltd., and A and B Construction Ltd., confirmed Thursday that Agriculture Minister Dave Stupich acts for the two companies purely in the capacity of an auditor.

James Chabot (SC Columbia River) said in the legislature Wednesday that Stupich's name was on the prospectus of A and B Homes Ltd., which he said is promoting a "million-dollar subdivision" of 33 homes in Spencer Heights, near Nanaimo.

Stupich said Wednesday he was only a signing officer, the corporation's auditor and its chief accountant. He said he owned no shares in the company and his name appeared on the prospectus as a matter of record.

He also said the land, "in all the 51 years" he's lived in Nanaimo, has never been used for farming or classified as farmland for tax purposes.

Meikle said Stupich "is an auditor by profession and a partner in the firm of Church, Picard, Lane and Newman who have been our auditing company since 1949."

He said the auditing company had always acted in the capacity of a signing officer, and Stupich had done this since 1963.

DICK CAVETT appears as the host on a 90-minute CBC-TV special titled, VD Blues, to be shown on Wednesday, February 28 at 8 p.m. on Channel 2 and 6. The program's format includes music, drama and humor but the content could hardly be more serious — the dangers of the VD epidemic which is sweeping North America. Immediately following Cavett's hour, a Canadian panel will discuss the show and the problems of venereal disease as they relate to Canada.

CBC-TV Telecasts VD Special

One of the major health problems of our time is venereal disease, which has now reached epidemic proportions in North America. Young people, especially, are its chief victims in Western society, with millions being added to their ranks each year.

To help combat the spread of this scourge of the young, CBC-TV is presenting in prime time, to reach as wide an audience as possible, the widely-acclaimed special program VD Blues, hosted by Dick Cavett. It was shown on public television in the U.S. last October.

It will be telecast on the CBC-TV network Wednesday, Feb. 28, at 8 p.m. as a 90-minute special — the first hour featuring Dick Cavett and such performers as Severn Darden, James Coco, and Arlo Guthrie; followed by a 30-minute panel discussion among young people and experts, who will include medical practitioners, psychiatrists and social workers.

Says Knowlton Nash, director of TV information programs, "This is one of the most important television programs produced in years. Recent statistics have shown a phenomenal increase in venereal disease in Canada, and to combat this near-epidemic, new ways must be found to reach young people before they become victims.

"VD Blues and the panel discussion to follow are being brought to Canadians at an early evening prime-time period as a public service because of the importance of the problem and because the program has been hailed by medical experts and social scientists as perhaps the most effective way yet devised to reach today's youngsters."

"This is an entertainment show, not a documentary program," says Dick Cavett. "It is a show young folks would want to watch, not a program they'd be told to watch."

The musical portions of the show include Arlo Guthrie singing in public for the first time his father's unpublished song "A Child of VD"; Karen Wyman singing "What Am I Gonna Do Now?"— specially written for this show by Fred Ebb and John Kander; Novella Nelson singing "Carrier" by Phil Moore; and the rock group Doctor Hook and the Medicine Show performing a number written by satirist and cartoonist Shel Silverstein called "Don't Give a Dose to the One You Love Most."

Comedy sketches include: Play for Germs, which features James Coco and Robert Drivas as the germs of venereal disease, gonorrhea and syphilis, and how they carry out their destructive work in the human body; a Jules Feiffer playlet called Silververlips, which features Marcia Rodd and Severn Darden in a doctor-patient situation; and Help, a sketch by black journalist Clayton Riley about the problems of a young black girl (played by Susan Batson) in a New Jersey ghetto.

Along the way, Dick Cavett makes some telling points about venereal disease, using the common or street terms, and explodes some myths that have misled many youngsters —for example, you don't catch the disease from toilet seats.

Immediately following Cavett's hour, Bruce Rogers will introduce the Canadian panel that will discuss the show and the problems of venereal disease as they relate to Canada.

MOVIES

Saturday

Destroy All Monsters (x), on 7 at 3. Japanese-made sci-fi.

Suddenly Single (xxx), on 5 at 4:30. A 1971 made-for-TV comedy-drama about a just-divorced man trying out a swinging new life-style starring Hal Halbrook and Barbara Rush.

The Pride and the Passion (xx), on 6 at 8:30. An overly-produced 1957 spectacle set during the Spanish Revolution against Napoleon starring Frank Sinatra, Cary Grant and Sophia Loren.

Girl With the Green Eyes (xxxx), on 2 at 9. Rita Tushingham turns in a sensitive performance as a naive country girl who has an affair with a married man in this British-made 1964 drama that co-stars Peter Finch.

I Walk the Line (xxx), on 5 at 9. Songs by Johnny Cash and excellent direction by John Frankenheimer highlights this 1970 drama about a hill-country sheriff whose moral fibre is put to the test by a moonshiner's seductive daughter. A good cast includes Gregory Peck and Tuesday Weld.

I Love a Mystery (xx), on 8 at 9. This is a first showing of an unsold 1966 TV series pilot, based on the mystery radio series and starring Ida Lupino and David Hartman.

The Rules of the Game (xxxx), on 9 at 9. Jean Renoir's 1939 classic is an ironic study of French aristocrats gambling on the brink of the Second World War. The setting is a lush country chateau where a weekend party leads to dishonor and tragedy. An excellent international cast includes Renoir himself in the role of Octave.

Horror of Dracula (xxx), on 11 at 9. Fine fare for horror fans in this English-made 1958 melodrama, done in the old style, and starring Peter Cushing and Christopher Lee.

Walt Until Dark (xxx), on 7 at 11. Audrey Hepburn plays a blind housewife terrorized by dope smugglers in this 1967 thriller that co-stars Alan Arkin and Richard Crenna.

The V.I.P.'s (xxx), on 12 at 11. An all-star cast that includes Elizabeth Taylor, Richard Burton and Orson Welles, highlights this 1963 drama about a group of airline passengers stranded at a London airport. Watch for an award-winning performance by Margaret Rutherford with equally good ones by Rod Taylor and Maggie Smith.

The Spy Who Came In From the Cold (xxx), on 5 at 11:15. The best-selling novel about hypocrisy and betrayal in the world of espionage is brought to the screen with all its grim realities intact. Richard Burton is effective as an agent supposedly on his last assignment and Oskar Werner is a standout as a member of the German intelligence.

The Naked Maja (xx), on 8 at 11:30. Story of the romance between the painter Francisco Goya and the Duchess of Alba, set against the turbulent background of 18th century Spain and starring Anthony Franciosa and Ava Gardner.

Rider in the Night (xx), on 4 at 11:45. European-made 1965 adventure set amid the Boer War and starring Anette DeVilliers and Johan Van Heerden.

The Wild Racers (x), on 2 at 12:15. Former pop idol Fabian stars in this silly drama about a swinging auto racer and his adventures on and off the track.

Victorian Melodrama On Purple Playhouse

The theatre of Queen Victoria's reign was dominated by a particular kind of drama. Just as the Elizabethans liked blood and plenty of it, the Victorians wanted moral contests — vice pitted against virtue, with Virtue Triumphant.

Evil — whether it be demon, drink, lust, or avarice — was always cast down by good, usually in the form of a handsome young hero who saved the proud beauty from a fate worse than death in the nick of time. Black and white conflicts couched in purple prose.

This tradition is to be revived by CBC-TV's Drama department with the introduction of Purple Playhouse, a series of eight one-hour Victorian dramas selected from the hundreds that were written, by authors now largely forgotten, to satisfy the Victorians' insatiable appetite for such fare.

Beginning Sunday February 25 at 9 p.m. Purple Playhouse will present some of the better examples of this genre — plays like Dion Boucicault's Used Up, Charles Reade's The Lyons Mail, Tom Taylor's Ticket-of-Leave Man, and Dracula.

While such plays offer plenty of opportunity for hamming it up or 'camping', executive producer Paddy Sampson says "we will in no way do a send-up of these plays. We're doing them absolutely straight. We believe Purple Playhouse will be a novel and refreshing offering for the Sunday night audience. Our purpose is to entertain, to expose a contemporary audience to plots that thrill in the style of a different era."

The series leads off with Barry Morse in the title role of Sweeney Todd the Demon Barber of Fleet Street, adapted and directed by Herb Roland from the original by George Dibdin Pitt. As Sweeney Todd, Barry Morse plays a most villainous wretch who, in partnership with a lady who runs a pie-shop, robs his customers and then "polishes 'em off" by means of a trick chair that sends his victims plunging into a cellar below, there to be disposed of by Mrs. Lovett (played by Betty Leighton). Kathryn Watt plays the beautiful young heroine and Tim Henry is the hero who saves her from Sweeney Todd.

Made partly on location at Toronto's waterfront and in the studios, where Nicolai Soloviov re-created the mean streets of Dickens' metropolis with its crooked houses and shops; Sweeney Todd is a marvellous evocation of fog-shrouded London and the sinister characters who inhabited its by-ways. Dickens himself recommended the play, "No one should miss seeing Sweeney Todd", he said.

Barry Morse as Sweeney Todd

MAN AT THE CENTER — Eight of the world's foremost photographers (including, clockwise, Jacques Lartigue; Paul Strand; Andre Kertesz; and Bill Brandt) will be interviewed on The Time Machine, an hour-long nostalgic "portrait" of photography from 1822 to the present, to be telecast on Monday, February 26 at 10 p.m. on Channels 2 and 6.

Monday

When Willie Comes Marching Home (xxx) on 4 at 9:30. A delightful and somewhat touching comedy about a West Virginia lad who has a series of misadventures during the Second World War. Dan Dailey and Corinne Calvert star.

Let's Make It Legal (xx), on 13 at noon. Claudette Colbert, MacDonald Carey and Marilyn Monroe star in this 1951 comedy about a couple who decide to get a divorce after 20 years of marriage — throwing their family and friends into a frenzy.

Separate Tables (xxxx), on 6 and 8 at 12:45. A faithful film version of two one act plays about the guests of a British seaside resort and their individual dramas. This 1957 film won Oscars for David Niven and Wendy Hiller and the remainder of the cast which includes Deborah Kerr, Burt Lancaster and Rita Hayworth are excellent.

The Outsider (xx), on 7 at 3:30. A private eye becomes the chief suspect in this 1967 crime drama starring Darren McGavin and Shirley Knight.

Incident in San Francisco (xx), on 12 at 7. 1971 TV-movie about a reporter who tries to prove the innocence of an accused murderer starring Christopher Connelly and Richard Kiley.

Murderers' Row (xx), on 4 at 9. This 1966 sequel to The Silencers once again stars Dean Martin as super-agent Matt Helm. This time he's after a kidnapped scientist's daughter (Ann-Margret) being held by an arch-villain well-played by Karl Malden.

RITA HAYWORTH
. . . on 6 and 8 at 12:45

The Stranger (xx), on 5 at 9. A sci-fi pilot for a possible series that follows the adventures of a U.S. astronaut starring Glenn Corbett, Cameron Mitchell, Lew Ayres and Sharon Acker.

The Night Stalker (xx), on 4 at 11:30. A made-for-TV thriller about the hunt for a brutal maniac starring Darren McGavin and Carol Lynley.

The Last Challenge (xx), on 7 and 12 at 11:30. A routine but well-acted western drama about a reformed gunman challenged by a young gunfighter. Starring in this 1967 movie are Glenn Ford, Chad Everett and Angie Dickinson.

The Three Musketeers (xxx), on 2 at 11:50. Walter Abel and Paul Lukas star in this 1935 screen adaptation of the classic Dumas adventure tale.

Rage (x), on 8 at midnight. Glenn Ford and Stella Stevens star in this 1966 melodrama about a disillusioned doctor in a Mexican village battling time and the desert to seek a rabies vaccine.

Francis Joins the WACs (xx), on 13 at 12:30. Silly, but Francis' fans will enjoy this 1954 service comedy that has Donald O'Connor re-recruited into the service — as a WAC!

SPECIALS

Monday

Stravinsky Remembered, on 9 at 8. A stunning production of Stravinsky's Le Rossignol (The Nightingale) dominates this tribute. The rarely staged 1914 work features exquisitely sung arias, exuberant modern ballet and lavish costumes. After the opera, documentary footage shows Stravinsky at work and a taped interview with his widow recalls their courtship. (90 mins.)

Burt Bacharach — Opus No. 3, on 8 at 10. Peter Ustinov's engaging portrayal of an aging Beethoven highlights this program that has Burt Bacharach paying tribute to the great composer. Burt's other guests include Stevie Wonder, Bette Midler and Gilbert O'Sullivan. (60 mins.)

Six-Week Series on Strategy and Tactics

CBC-FM's Ideas begins a six-week series on Strategy and Tactics on Monday, February 26. Programs are broadcast Mnondays through Fridays at 10:03 p.m.

Producer James Anderson describes the series: "We are interested in the application of a formal plan and course of action with the object of overcoming or converting a hostile or indifferent opponent or part. A major sub-theme is a military history of strategy and tactics. Other main threads are the strategy and tactics of political maneuvering in the international arena, and biographies of people and institutions whose fame is due to the way in which they effected their ambitions and objectives."

Included in this series are the 1972 BBC Reith Lectures by Andrew Shonfield, director of the Royal Institute of International Affairs in London. He talks on the subject Europe — Journey to an Unknown Destination. The Lectures are presented on Thursday nights.

Other topics dealt with in the series include chess, religion, strategies of seduction, sports, marketing and the stock market, and detective fiction. Several programs focus on politics, diplomacy, and verbal warfare, with six programs on the strategy and tactics of war from 1648 to the present.

BREBEUF'S CHAPEL, Ste. Marie-Among-the-Hurons located about 1,000 miles from Quebec City, is highlighted in The Magic Circle, the second part of CBC-TV's Images of Canada series, to be shown on Wednesday, February 28 at 9:30 p.m. on Channels 2 and 6. Jean de Brebeuf is the Jesuit martyr who established the first Christian mission in hostile Huron territory during the 17th century.

MOVIES

Wednesday

The Bachelor Party (xxx), on 6 and 8 at 12:45. Paddy Chayefsky (Marty) expanded and embellished his TV play and turned it into this excellent 1957 movie about a group of men taking a night out to celebrate the forthcoming marriage of one of the group. A competent cast includes Don Murray, Carolyn Jones and E. G. Marshall.

The Joker is Wild (xxx), on 11 at 6. A 1957 biography of comedian Joe E. Lewis starring Frank Sinatra and Mitzi Gaynor.

Les Miserables (xxxx), on 13 at 7. Fredric March and Charles Laughton star in this 1935 adaptation of Victor Hugo's classic story about a man who went to prison for stealing a loaf of bread.

The Unforgiven (xxx), on 8 at 8. Director John Houston assembled a good cast (Burt Lancaster, Audrey Hepburn, Lillian Gish, Charles Bickford, Audie Murphy) for this 1960 western drama about a pioneer family who are faced with Indian hostility.

You'll Never See Me Again (xx), on 4 at 8:30. A made-for-TV mystery about a wife who mysteriously disappears.

Tom, Dick and Harry (xxxx), on 2 at 11:30. A completely charming 1941 comedy about a telephone operator who dreams what life would be like with three eligible suitors starring Ginger Rogers, George Murphy and Burgess Meredith.

Tunes of Glory (xxxx), on 6 and 8 at midnight. A superb British-made 1960 drama recommended particularly for the magnificent performances by its two stars — Alec Guiness and John Mills. The story concerns the bitter struggle between a careless, goldbricking but popular colonel (Guiness) and an intelligent, disciplined, civilized young officer (Mills) who supersedes him in command.

MOVIES

Tuesday

The Deadly Hunt (xx), on 12 at 7. A 1971 TV drama about a young couple pursued by paid killers amid a raging forest fire. Filmed on-location in and around Vancouver and starring Peter Lawford, Anthony Franciosa and Anjanette Comer.

Dragonwyck (xx), on 13 at 7. Gene Tierney and Vincent Price star in this 1946 melodrama set in a gloomy 1850 mansion on the Hudson River.

I Love a Mystery (xx), on 5 at 8. A 1966 unsold mystery TV series pilot, based on the radio program of the same name and starring Ida Lupino and David Hartman.

Connection (xx), on 4 at 8:30. Created by Philip D'Antoni ('The French Connection'), this 1973 crime drama tells of a New York City journalist trying to arrange a deal between jewel thieves and insurance agents.

Call to Danger (xx), on 7 at 9:30. This pilot for a possible series stars Peter Graves (Mission: Impossible) as a federal agent trying to rescue a kidnapped underworld informer.

Face of a Fugitive (xx), on 13 at 11. Fred MacMurray plays a man with a secret past in this 1959 western drama.

Five Desperate Women (xx), on 4 at 11:30. A psychopath turns a class reunion into a weekend of terror in this 1971 drama that stars Julie Somars, Bradford Dillman and Stefanie Powers.

All the Young Cannibals (xx), on 7 and 12 at 11:30. A muddled 1960 soap opera about romantic and moral dilemmas starring Robert Wagner, Natalie Wood and George Hamilton. Watch for Pearl Bailey in a cameo role as an alcoholic singer — she steals the show!

It Started in Naples (xxx), on 6 and 8 at midnight. A good-humored 1960 comedy drama about the romantic adventures of an American lawyer in Italy starring Clark Gable, Sophia Loren and Vittorio De Sica.

Safari (xxx), on 13 at 12:30. Tense and action-filled adventure about a safari in search of the rare black-maned lion starring Victor Mature and Janet Leigh — made in 1956.

Tuesday

Bake-Off Awards, on 4 at 4. The 24th annual Pillsbury Bake-Off is telecast from Beverly Hills. (30 mins.))

Our Costly Cleanup, on 2 and 6 at 10. This report probes the financial implications of the Federal government's "clean up or close up" warning to major industrial pollutors. (60 mins.)

America, on 5 at 10. Birth of an industrial giant . . . America's technology boom as Alistair Cook hosts, Money On the Land, another in his 'America' series. (60 mins.)

Who Profits—Who Pays For Pollution Cleanup?

To many Canadians, pollution control and cleaning up to restore some of our already-despoiled environmental quality is shaping up as our major national issue of the decade. Effects of man's unconcern for his natural surroundings have been evident for decades; now, in the light of widespread concern for man's somewhat doubtful future in a ravaged world, we have reached the action stage.

But who will pay for this massive cleanup? And who will profit? Just how much can we afford to invest in preserving our environment? And just how clean do we have to be? Or want to be?

On Tuesday, Feb. 27 at 10 p.m., CBC Television presents a hard-hitting dollars-and-cents "inventory" of the cost of this massive project, on Our Costly Cleanup, an hour-long TV special investigating the cures, costs and effects of restoring our environment.

A CBC-Financial Post co-production, the program places a dollar value on fighting pollution in six critical areas of our country's industry. Research has shown that in many cases, it may be 10 times as costly to eliminate 75% of a contaminant as it will be ot clean up 50%. How much can we afford?

The special makes an extensive examination of several of Canada's major industries: automobile manufacturing, pulp-and-paper production, mining and smelting are among those explored. These industries, singled out for strict pollution control by governments, faced with the prospect of cleaning up or closing down, have responded in different ways.

The CBC cameras look at the dilemna of auto manufacturers, faced with providing complex equipment to meet both domestic and foreign control. It's an expensive proposition, and it may be safely said that the costs will likely be passed on to the consumer.

In smelting and metal refining, Canada's major producers have agreed to clean up their operations as required by law, but insist that standards set for them be applied to competitors. Otherwise, they claim, their firms will be in an unfavorable position in the marketplace. Should the government — and the taxpayer — subsidize such operations to keep them competitive?

Our Costly Cleanup examines current claims that a higher level of unemployment will result in fighting pollution. Many companies can afford to absorb the cost of cleaning up; others are in a position to pass the cost along to the consumer; but some find themselves in a two-way squeeze, between absorbing the added costs or raising prices, resulting in the elimination of their goods from highly competitive markets.

One such company is examined — an aging pulp-paper mill. With antiquated and effluent-producing machinery, this firm is faced with heavy costs; yet many people will be jobless if it is forced to close down. Who will make the crucial decision, and again, who will pay?

But cleaning up doesn't always have to be a losing proposition. One large mining-refining firm in British Columbia has proven this, and in so doing, created jobs. Efforts to reduce sulphur pollution turned into a new fertilizer business.

Our Costly Cleanup, a CBC-Financial Post co-production, is a CBC Ottawa project. Clive Baxter is host of this cold, hard look at the costs of cleaning up our environment. The program was researched by Steven Duncan of the Financial Post, and was produced and directed by Brian O'Connor of the CBC's CBOT-TV, Ottawa.

CBC-TV Gets Five Out of Five And Eight of Top Ten Ratings

The BBM Bureau of Measurement figures for January, reveal that five out of the first five and eight of the top 10 rated television shows in the competitive CBC-CTV areas were carried by CBC television.

A quick and dramatic rise in audience figures went to the CBC-TV Vancouver-produced series The Beachcombers, starring Bruno Gerussi, which rose from 18th to sixth place.

Once again, the number one series in the top 10 was The Wonderful World of Disney, with 3,721,000 viewers. Next was The Partridge Family, with 2,885,000. All In The Family was third with 2,644,000. In Fourth position with 2,615,000 viewers was the Canadian-produced wild life series of specials To The Wild Country, with John and Janet Foster. Narrator-host is Lorne Greene.

Fifth to tenth place positions went to Black Beauty, The Beachcombers, Hockey Night in Canada (CBC-TV Saturday games), The Brady Bunch and Hockey Night in Canada (both CTV) and Cannon.

The audience for CBC television news, The National edition at 11 p.m., has gone up by 12 per cent since last November. Its total for January was 1,163,000 versus 881,000 for CTV, a difference of 282,000 viewers.

As for the Sunday night audience, CBC television's Weekend series, seen 10-11 p.m., outranked CTV's W5 by 1,102,000 to 898,000 for a margin of 204,000 viewers.

Looking at the total audience for programs carried by the CBC's full English television network, which includes viewers outside the common CBC-CTV areas, it is noted in the BBM figures that three Canadian-produced series ranked in the top 10 shows. They were The Beachcombers, ranked third, with 3,634,000 audience; To The Wild Country, ranked sixth, with 3,462,000 and the Saturday Hockey Night In Canada telecast, seventh, with 3,065,000 viewers.

Following is the full list of the top 10 shows in the common competitive CBC-CTV areas and their audiences:

Disney	3,721,000
Partridge	2,885,000
All In The Family	2,644,000
To Wild Country ?	2,615,000

CBC Presents Free Concert in Victoria

The Purcell String Quartet of Vancouver will be heard in a free public concert at the MacPherson Playhouse in Victoria on March 1. The concert will be sponsored by the CBC and recorded for broadcast on CBC-FM Radio's foremost arts series, CBC Monday Night, March 19 at 9 p.m.

The Quartet of Norman Nelson and Frederick Nelson, violin, Phillippe Etter, viola and Ian Hampton, cello will perform Minuet and Andante, Opus 103 by Haydn, Quartet in F Minor, Opus 95 by Beethoven, Harry Freedman's Graphic 11 and Brahms Quartet in A Minor.

Since its first public performance in Vancouver in March 1969 with the distinguished Chinese pianist Fou Ts'ong, the Purcell String Quartet has become well known across Canada through its frequest coast-to-coast recitals for the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation. All of the members of the quartet are principal players in the Vancouver Symphony Orchestra.

In 1970 they commissioned two string quartets from the Canadian composers Barbara Pentland and Murray Schafer, and gave their premiere performances in Vancouver, their European premiers in Wigmore Hall, as well as recording them in Montreal for the International Service of the CBC. The Quartet has performed in San Francisco, Ottawa, Montreal and the Orford Summer Camp (Jeunesses Musicales). They have also made a short tour of England and have broadcast for the BBC.

Tickets for the March 1 concert at the MacPherson Playhouse are available free of charge from the Playhouse Box Office on a first come first served basis. Tickets are limited to two per person.

CBC Radio Skating Coverage

CBC Radio will be providing listeners with daily progress reports on the World Figure Skating Championships in Bratislava, Czechoslovakia, from February 26 to March 3. This year Canada is sending one of its largest and strongest teams to the Championships.

Bob Willson and Larry Harding will be reporting from Bratislava Monday through Friday during local sportscasts and on Radio Noon. On Saturday, March 3, which is the last day of competition, there'll be a special live report to the full network at 5:55 p.m. EST. It is hoped by the time this report is heard that the competitions will have finished. A complete detailed wrap-up report on the Championships will be featured on The Weekend Sound of Sports on Sunday, March 4 at 10:10 p.m. EST.

Among the competitors who will be representing Canada are Karen Magnussen, the Canadian Senior Ladies Champion and runner-up in the World Championship last year, Troller Cranston, the Canadian Senior Men's Champion and who is considered one of the top free skaters in the world today.

School Board Approves $29.7M Budget

Total spending of $29.73 million was given tentative approved by Greater Victoria School Board Thursday night at the end of a lengthy finance meeting.

The sum is $2.94 million greater than total spending budgeted in 1972 and the operating portion totalling $4.66 million is $2.45 million more than it was for the current year.

The board's operating budget represents 110.5 per cent of the basic education program of $22.3 million, which is shared by the department of education.

Costs above the operating portion for 1973-74 will total $5.07 million, up from $4.59 million, and are largely self-supporting or are non-sharable expenses. They include $1.87 million for summer school, driver training, textbook rentals and similar self-sustaining expenses; $2.77 million for debt services, and $420,000 for non-sharable capital outlays.

District superintendent A. J. Longmore pointed out to trustees at the end of the meeting that the three other B.C. school districts of similar size had approved budget increases of over 111 per cent.

"It's not exactly a giant step forward," chairman Peter Bunn said.

"But we have offset most of the cutbacks of last year. There's some educational betterment in it."

The largest item on the educational bill is $19.7 million for teachers' salaries and fringe benefits.

A further $360,000 is budgeted for additional staff and projects.

While arguing the extra staffing allowances, which mean reducing student-teacher ratios, trustee Walter Donald said if teachers had taken more responsibility during salary negotiations the board would be more willing to fight for lower student-teacher ratios.

"If it had not been for that 8.95 per cent increase (awarded to teachers in December) we would have had something to work with," Bunn added.

"It disturbs me greatly that this group is calling our teachers greedy," Trustee William Rose argued. "These raises don't exceed the bounds of those given other groups in the community.

"Maybe they are getting too much, but it's unfair to call them greedy."

The final total figure for teachers' expenses represents a 12-per-cent increase in costs over last year and means about 20 more teachers can be hired. Another 20 teachers will further reduce pupil-teacher ratio because of decreases in pupil enrolment.

Cost of substitute teachers went up almost 20 per cent in the new budget to a total of $329,590.

A 24 per cent increase in carpentry and repair costs was protested by trustee Philip Ney, who was told by Bunn that lumber costs had gone up 100 per cent in 15 months.

"That's our poor deflated forest industry with 95 per cent profits last year that we have to blame for that," Bunn added.

"Maybe we should build classrooms into the sides of mountains," Ney replied.

Board members were told that increases in food costs and service charges had greatly increased home economics costs.

HUMAN GUINEA PIGS 'UNPROTECTED'

WASHINGTON (AP) — A U.S. Senate committee investigating the ethics of human medical experiments has been told of children subjected to asthma attacks, men paid to take LSD, and experimental pregnancies.

Such experiments are widespread, not rare, and subject to no standards aimed at protecting the rights of the human subjects involved, the health committee was told Thursday.

Dr. Robert W. Veatch gave details of case studies compiled by the Institute of Society, Ethics and the Life Sciences, Hastings-in-Hudson, N.Y.

He declined to provide the researchers' names or where the research was conducted.

Dr. Veatch said those included hundreds and perhaps thousands of "experimental pregnancies" produced in tests on the effectiveness of various birth control methods.

The Socreds changed the law, he said, because they wanted to allow Western Mines to use Buttle Lake as a dumping ground for tailings and to allow Western to dam the streams and lakes around the mine operations as a power supply.

Any future changes in the size of the province's parks will have to be made through the legislature, instead of by cabinet order, he said.

MAJOR PARKS

And as a start, the government will be introducing legislation creating a number of "major" provincial parks in the following areas: near the B.C.-Yukon border; on the Queen Charlotte Islands; at the north end of the Gulf of Georgia, which would be somewhere northeast of Campbell River; near the B.C.-Alberta border, including at least three parks in the area of the East Kootenays.

Williams has said in the past that a number of major parks would be established this session. He has said the total acreage would be around 2.5 million acres, but he gave no figures Thursday on the total acreage involved.

"We are going to be preserving some of that magnificent landscape that the previous administration refused to preserve," Williams said.

TOTAL ACREAGE

He cited figures on total park acreage during the Socred regime which showed the 1952 figure of total parkland as more than nine million acres, falling to 6.5 million acres in 1972.

During that time, he said, the province's population has doubled "and yet the loss of parkland exceeded 2.5 million acres."

Williams termed the situation "probably the greatest retardation of park preservation anywhere in the world in the last 20 years, especially with the growing population and increased awareness of citizens of the necessity to protect the environment."

Deletions from provincial parks, through cabinet orders, created the situation, Williams said, adding that it is a situation which will not be allowed to continue under the NDP government.

Williams went over the history of Strathcona Provincial Park and Western Mines' involvement, saying the mining operation had first been described as a "10-acre hole in the park." The hole had grown, he said, through additional space and land use required for removing concentrates, building bunkhouses, transporting barges across lakes, building townsites, putting in highways. The company paid $2 million for a highway to be built into the operation, he said, but the cost was double that, and the remainder was picked up by the Social Credit government.

Power was then needed to run the mine, so approval was given for lakes and streams to be dammed. And then permission was granted for Buttle Lake to become the depository for mine tailings.

"Once the camel gets into the tent, he destroys the tent entirely," Williams said. The final result was a "major industrial operation" in the middle of a provincial park.

JUST BARELY

Williams identified the provincial parks in which pending mineral claims are to be denied as: Stone Mountain Park, Muncho Lake Park, Strathcona, Kokanee Glacier Park and Wells-Grey Park.

About 15 mineral claims are involved, he said.

Williams also read to the house a "major policy change" which will govern in the future the manner in which land is to be used in provincial parks.

LAND-USE LAWS UNVEILED

Any aggrieved landowner may appeal to the Supreme Court, but only, the legislation states, "on a question of law or excess or jurisdiction."

The bill states the aims of the commission include preservation of agricultural land for farm use; encouraging the establishment and maintenance of family farms; greenbelt protection; preservation of land for residential or industrial development, and preservation of parkland for recreational use.

The land designated as agricultural, greenbelt, land bank or parkland reserves can include Crown land, although Stupich told reporters there will be "vast areas" of the province which the commission won't be interested in saving for farmland at this time.

The total area of farmland to be studied by the commission, he estimated, would be no more than about 3 per cent of the total land area of the province.

The commission may lease back to the former owner the farmland it buys if he wishes to farm it; develop and improve it for possible resale; or even farm it directly, Stupich said, adding: "The commission can make almost any kind of deal with the farmer."

There is also provision in the legislation for tax incentives to encourage the dedication of privately-owned farmland to permanent farm use, and to increase the land's agricultural productivity.

In cases where commission lands are unoccupied, or the lease does not provide for tax payments by the lessee the commission is empowered to pay the municipality or regional district a grant in lieu of taxes.

One of the most contentious sections of the bill apears to be the one that states: "Land shall be deemed not to be taken or injuriously affected by the reason of the designation by the commission of that land as an agricultural land reserve, greenbelt land reserve, land bank land reserve or parkland reserve."

Tackled on this point at the press conference, Stupich said there is no question of compensation involved because to have transfer of ownership there must be a seller and a buyer.

"The commission is undertaking to be the purchaser if the farmer comes to the commission first," he said. After that it will be a case of negotiating with the particular farmer.

Stupich said the commission would study market values in the particular community and "arrive at a price that is fair."

Asked if the policy is giving B.C. farmers cause for complaint, particularly those who might be nearing retirement age and hoping to sell land that is not viable as farmland, Stupich said: "People who have been sitting on land hoping they might be able to persuade the municipal council their farmland should be rezoned for residential or industrial use — they might be aggrieved."

He said most of the land that will be affected is already zoned, if not used, as agricultural, and the government doesn't agree that there will be any detrimental effect on land values as a result of the legislation.

Stupich said the legislation will not be referred to the legislature's standing committee on agriculture for detailed consideration at this session.

But he hopes the committee will have a part to play between the end of this session and the fall session, in helping to sound out public reaction to the legislation and evaluate what it has accomplished.

The community will be invited to make representations to the government during the spring and summer, and these will be considered in deciding whether any changes to the legislation are required later, he said.

Stupich said no cabinet minister or MLA will serve on the commission. He said it will be desirable from the public point of view to have "someone with some stature in the agricultural community," although not necessarily a farmer, as chairman.

Land Control Angers Critics

A wave of angry reaction from the three opposition parties in the legislature greeted the introduction Thursday of the NDP government's legislation setting up a Provincial Land Commission to control land use in B.C. under four specific designations.

Some of the main opposition charges were that the legislation removes the individual's right to land ownership denies any compensation resulting from lowered land values and cuts across the jurisdictional rights of local authorities.

In a prepared statement, Social Credit house leader Frank Richter said private ownership in the province is "destroyed" because the commission will be able to designate "every square inch" of B.C. under the four categories reserving land for agricultural, greenbelt, land bank and parkland purposes.

Compensation is denied for monetary injury suffered as a result of the designation, and the jurisdiction over land now held by municipalities and regional districts is transferred to a five-man commission not directly responsible to the legislature, he said.

As prices are determined solely at the discreation of the commission, any protection that now exists under the province's expropriation laws "has gone into oblivion."

Richter said the provision that an appeal can be made only on a question of law or that the commission has exceeded its jurisdiction effectively means there is no appeal.

Calling the bill "vicious," Don Phillips (SC-South Peace River) said it appears to give the land commission "complete dictatorial powers to take land from anyone without compensation" by any means it considers necessary.

Conservative house leader and Oak Bay MLA Scott Wallace claimed the legislation spells "disaster to individual rights" and "clobbers" the landowner.

His Conservative colleague, Hugh Curtis (Saanich and the Islands) said the bill "may well prove to be the Bill 33 of the NDP government" — a reference to the much-criticized compulsory arbitrations aspects of the labor legislation passed by the former Social Credit government and since repealed by the NDP.

"This is easily the most sweeping piece of legislation with respect to land control which one could have expected to see. It is bureaucratic and faceless in its concept because it says the commission is supreme," Curtis said.

"It neutralizes municipalities and regional districts in the planning function and it makes no provision for local input."

Liberal spokesman on agricultural matters, Alan Williams (West Vancouver-Howe Sound) said it was the "most momentous" piece of legislation to come before the house in many years, far exceeding in impact the bill brought in last week which deals with government-run car insurance.

He predicted it will be some time before the full significance of the powers granted the commission is generally understood. The initial impression is, however, that the commission will have autocratic authority in dealing with a variety of land uses, and therefore takes away the jurisdiction over land now enjoyed by levels of local government.

North and South Saanich Farmers' Institute held a stormy meeting two weeks ago and sent in a 160-name petition suggesting an alternative method of protecting farmland.

President Bill Taylor commented today: "The government has paid no heed. They seem pretty determined about this."

The petition asked for future sales of farmland to proceed unencumbered unless land was to be converted to non-farming use. It also suggested legislation giving the government first refusal to purchase for market prices land to be held for non-farm use.

The B.C. Federation of Agriculture circulated a similar petition and local farmers received support for their stand from Sidney and North Saanich Chamber of Commerce.

WOOD EXPORT BAN URGED

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senator Robert Packwood will ask Congress next week to enact legislation that would ban all exports of timber from the United States by Jan. 1, 1977.

Exports to Japan — nearly three million board feet in 1972 from Washington, Oregon and California — are "creating a severe domestic shortage of softwood lumber and plywood," Packwood says in his proposed bill.

SPARWOOD (CP) — A bulldozer apparently ripped into a natural gas pipeline late Thursday, causing an explosion. No injuries were reported.

CHICAGO (AP) — More than half of the winning horses at Illinois racetracks had been given illegal drugs last year, says chairman Anthony Scariano of the Illinois Racing Board. While this could indicate the races were fixed, Scariano said prosecution is difficult.

the weather

A weather system out in the Pacific is forecast to bring increasing cloudiness along with a few rainshowers or periods of rain to southwestern B.C. early Saturday. This cloud will spread eastwards reaching the Kootenay district by Saturday evening. Elsewhere skies will be generallly sunny except for a few cloudy periods mostly in the morning. Temperatures across the province will remain mild.

Gov't to Control Land Use in Province

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

A Provincial Land Commission with sweeping powers to control land use in British Columbia and designate land for agricultural, greenbelt, recreational or urban land bank purposes will be set up under legislation introduced Thursday by Agriculture minister Dave Stupich.

The five-member commission will get $25 million for buying up agricultural land in the province and another $32 million for the other purchases from special funds already provided for parkland, greenbelt, and land bank acquisition.

One of the key provisions of the legislation is that there is no automtic right to compensation for land designated under any of the four categories.

This means, Stupich told a press conference immediately after the Land Commission Act was given first reading, that the government doesn't admit that in designating land for any of the four purposes "we have affected its value."

Equally, however, it doesn't mean the land won't be purchased, he said.

He stressed there is no power of expropriation in the act and nothing that will stop the farmer from selling his land to anyone.

"But the purchaser knows that if it is designated farmland the odds are he will never be able to do anything but farm it," unless he can show why the land should be exempted.

Under the legislation, any bylaw or regulation of a municipality or regional district which conflicts with the provisions of the act or its accompanying regulations is declared invalid.

Stupich said he expects the legislation will be passed at this session of the legislature and proclaimed by the end of April.

One section of the act incorporates the provisions of the order-in-council passed last Dec. 21, under which no local authority may rezone agricultural land to any other use and no buildings may be erected on farmland. The legislation, when passed, will supersede that order and be retroactive to Dec. 21.

Stupich said he expects to start approaching people to serve on the commission within two or three weeks. His department has already started working out "gross boundaries," defining the various areas of land in B.C. that have been designated for agricultural, greenbelt, recreational or land bank purposes.

These boundaries, he said, will also likely be known by the end of April.

Any landowner who feels his property should not have been designated may appeal for exemption, but this exemption will have to be approved by the provincial cabinet.

Not all such applications need be on an individual basis, however, Stupich said. In some cases involving land on the outskirts of municipalities whose agricultural value was questionable, dozens of applications might be dealt with in a blanket decision.

FARM PROTEST

VERNON (CP) — The president of the British Columbia Federation of Agriculture, Charles Bernhardt, has called on farmers to take strong action against the government's proposed new farmland preservation legislation. Bernhardt said today he will recommend to B.C. growers that they cease work on this year's crop.

He said it's clear the provincial government has an absolute disregard for the individual land owner and certainly for the farmer. The federation will protest in whatever manner it can, he said, with the possibility of a protest demonstration in Victoria.

Door Slams On Mining

By BRIAN BUTTERS
Times Staff

The provincial government slammed the door shut Thursday on future mineral development in all B.C. parks.

The news came in the legislature from Resources Minister Bob Williams, who announced a sweeping new policy for land use within the province's network of provincial parks, coming down particularly hard on the operations of Western Mines in Strathcona Provincial Park on Vancouver Island. The minister also announced plans to establish a number of new parks throughout the province.

Williams said Western Mines will have to abide by the following rules if it wishes to continue its operations in Strathcona:

—Application must be made to the parks branch before any timber is removed from the park.

—A permit for construction of a townsite at Ralph River, granted by the former Social Credit administration, is to be rescinded.

—Plans for disposing of tailings from the mine operation will first have to be cleared through the parks branch.

—Stumpage rates being charged Western Mines will be three times the going rate for operations inside Strathcona.

—Damming of lakes and streams in the area around the mine's operations to provide power will not be allowed.

Williams also said it will be "useless" for any mining companies to either stake or attempt to record any mineral claims inside any provincial park territory. Any pending claims on territory inside five B.C. parks he named will be denied by the authorities within his department.

Williams said legislation will be introduced this session to bring control of waterways inside provincial parks back to the parks branch, where he said it had been before the Social Credit government

$ Drubbed: Monetary Crisis Looms

Times News Services

The U.S. dollar took a drubbing in panicky trading on European money markets today, bringing hints of a new monetary crisis. The price of gold zoomed to new highs touching $95 an ounce but later settled to $85.

The dollar steadied after government banks intervened and bought up dollars to keep it at the price set by the recent 10 per cent devaluation.

"Something has to be done," one London currency dealer said when the dollar sank to its lowest point since devaluation. "We can't go on like this."

Gold skyrocketed to $95 per ounce early today on London's free market and went to new highs in Zurich, Rome and Hong Kong.

But at the London afternoon price fixing the price dropped for the first time in two weeks.

The dollar's plunge and gold's climb were directly related.

London dealers said speculators and international money managers simply did not trust the dollar over the weekend, when exchanges are closed and government decisions on currency rates usually come.

They were switching instead into almost anything else — gold, silver, Swiss francs, marks, tin, copper, even the once-weak British pound.

A West German government spokesman said the central bank intervention was brief and small scale — it bought less than $10 million, compared with the $6 billion it bought in the crisis before dollar devaluation two weeks ago.

Arab World Seethes

Times News Services

The Arab world today seethed with demands for revenge against Israel for the shooting down of a Libyan airliner over the Sinai Desert.

The semi-official Cairo newspaper Al Ahram today called on Arab guerrillas to strike Israeli targets throughout the world "to show that in this jungle the Israeli wolf is not supreme."

And Egyptian vice-president Hussein Shaffei hinted today that his nation may end the shaky Middle East ceasefire and resume its "war of attrition" with Israel.

"If the enemy wants to scare us, we will tell him we are waiting in our positions here and as a minimum we can get him back to the situation of 1970 and make him exhausted," Shafei said.

In 1969, and up until Aug. 7, 1970, when a U.S.-initiated ceasefire took effect, Egypt and Israel fought almost daily artillery duels and staged raids across the Suez Canal.

"We ask God to give us strength to make the enemy exhausted through guerrilla action and political and economic means," Shafei said.

"We are a nation of faith and know that Israel is not liked by anybody in this world . . . the Zionists are the enemies of humanity and they cannot find anybody to love them," he said.

In Rabat, King Hassan II of Morocco, regarded by the West as a moderate, said he will send army troops to Syria to fight Israel. Previously, he has refused to commit Moroccan troops to such action.

Hassan did not say how many troops he would send from his 52,000-man army but he said only volunteers would go.

He said he was taking the action in response to Israeli "aggression."

U.S. Resumes Bombing Laos

Times News Services

The United States has resumed limited air activity over Laos in response to a request from Laotian Premier Souvanna Phouma.

However, officials in Washington said details would have come from the U.S. Pacific Command in Honolulu.

White House press secretary Ronald Ziegler said, meanwhile, that the U.S. is hopeful that the ceasefire would be fully implemented soon and that the renewed fighting would end.

"Since the cease-fire agreement went into effect at noon Thursday there have been 29 recorded violations throughout the kingdom. About 90 per cent of the violations have been committed by foreign troops," Souvanna said.

"I am certainly sure that the United States will respond positively to the request for resumption of the bombing. You will soon hear the other side's reaction about the resumption of the bombing."

In Cambodia, military sources reported heavy casualties on both sides Thursday in a series of attacks by Communist Khmer Rouge guerrillas against three outposts south of Phnom Penh.

In reports of fighting in what is the last official war in Southeast Asia, western military sources said about 2,900 Communists fighting along Highways 2 and 3 are the same guerrillas who cut Highway 1 linking Phnom Penh and Saigon earlier this month.

In Vietnam, procedural disputes among the four members of a truce-keeping team again delayed investigations today into two cases involving violations of the Jan. 28 cease-fire.

Meanwhile, External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp flies to Paris tonight for the international conference that is purported to guarantee the peace in Vietnam. But informed observers expect little more from the meeting than a rubber stamp on the Jan. 27 ceasefired agreement.

Crown Books Open

For the first time B.C. Hydro books will come under the detailed scrutiny of the legislature's public accounts committee — as soon as next week — to be followed by two other Crown corporations, B.C. Railway and the Liquor Control Board.

At the committee's first business meeting today there was unanimous approval of a motion by Pat McGeer (L. — Vancouver-Point Grey) that Hydro's board of directors be asked to send Hydro chairman David Cass-Beggs and any officials considered necessary to help him answer committee questions on Hydro accounts for the fiscal year ending March 31, 1972.

PERSONAL APPEARANCE

McGeer said a personal appearance before the committee is essential because the public accounts relating to Hydro are in such consolidated form that it is impossible to pick out points of detail.

McGeer also said he wants the committee to use the procedure for detailed examination of the accounts of B.C. Railway and the Liquor Control Board, in that order.

On another motion from the MLA, it was agreed that individual committee members will be allowed the help of personal staff, including secretaries and special assistants, in taking notes from government vouchers that are made available for inspection on request.

Such facilities are needed, he said, if MLAs are to be saved many hours of laborious note-taking. As an example, McGeer cited the difficulty involved last year in probing the "rather strange" and bulky travel vouchers relating to Phil Gaglardi, the former Social Credit rehabilitation minister.

Earlier, when comptroller-general John Minty told the committee about customary arrangements for voucher examination, with his own staff in attendance to help MLAs, McGeer reacted testily.

"Public accounts must be public accounts," he said.

Socred Plea to Commons

Members of the Social Credit caucus in the B.C. legislature, today, asked the House of Commons to set up a special committee to overturn legislation introduced Thursday by the NDP government which controls all land development in the province. (Earlier reaction on Page 2).

In a telegram to Prime Minister Trudeau house leader Frank Richter said the legislation is an enfringement on the basic right of the individual—granted, he said, in the Canadian Bill of Rights — to enjoyment of property.

He said the special committee should hold hearings around the province and recommend to Parliament that the legislation be overturned if it is found to be contrary to the Bill of Rights.

Richter said he was unaware of any precedent for a committee of the House of Commons to overthrow provincial government legislation "but we've never had such vicious legislation as this before," he said.

"The ramifications of this bill are not being understood by the people," Richter said. "Not just farmland, but all land in the province is affected."

WORLD WE LIVE IN FAST GOING MAD

Times News Services

TORONTO — Even if the world doesn't come to a bad end through over-population and pollution, changing conditions may drive everybody crazy, says Dr. Daniel Cappon, a psychiatrist and professor of environmental studies at York University in Toronto.

He posed the questions:

Is mental pollution rather than chemical pollution the real threat to mankind, especially in North America?

Will the din of industrial construction, the tensions of over-crowding, and the stresses of the "rat race" life in large cities eventually drive large segments of the population literally mad?

And will ultimately only the "intellectually elite" survive in any strength to carry on the human race to bigger and better things — only the mentally superior who are able to best cope with and adjust to life's growing "psycho-social bombardment"?

Most important, has this "survival of the mentally fittest" process already begun?

Cappon said "yes" to all his own questions.

And he suggested to science writers Thursday at the Ontario Science Centre that in this context, man's "limits to mental growth" may be the crucial factor in determining how and perhaps whether man survives even intellectually, especially if little is done to attack the causes of today's multi-faceted environmental problems.

Cappon noted that there has been a massive increase in the rate of mental illness, emotional and psychosomatic illness in recent years "to the point that every other person living on Manhattan Island is receiving or in need of psychiatric care."

He detailed other symptoms of the accelerating alienation and psychological disturbances among the populace, concluding that it would seem that unless these problems are overcome and the trends are reversed, "we've had it anyway, mentally if not physically."

But do not fear.

Cappon, after painting a rather disturbing picture of the possible magnitude and consequences of mental pollution, adds that he is optimistic about the outcome.

First, he thinks that man will solve the problems of physical pollutants without too much difficulty. And, with this in mind, he calls for restraint in "dooms-day" predictions, since this tends to stir up the anxieties of people and make the psychological problems worse.

The mental pollution problem is a different kettle of fish, containing good and bad.

On the one hand, he suggests a large number of people are going to succumb to the increasing "psycho-social bombardment."

On the other hand, he firmly believes in the capacity of man's brain to improve and, it is hoped, to adapt to mental stresses.

He suggests that only the "intellectual elite" will likely be able to take advantage of this mental flexibility and brainpower reserve in adapting to the changing environment.

Shafts Pierce Darkened House

The comments flew thick and fast through the murk Thursday afternoon when the lights went out for five minutes in the legislature.

The blackout, caused by a high-voltage fault in the submarine transmission cables which supply Vancouver Island from the mainland was general on the island, and lasted between five and 30 minutes.

Speaker Gordon Dowding recessed the legislature after members pointed out that the Hansard recording equipment was not working during the power failure.

Remarks caught by reporters, if not by Hansard equipment, were:

To the NDP from the Social Credit opposition: "You finally did it — you turned off all the lights in the province."

To the Socreds from the NDP: "Bennett's back."

To the Liberals, who were about to move non-confidence in the government: "Just another stalling tactic."

To restore power, all island generation was increased and the standby gas turbine station at Chemainus was brought into operation. Service was mostly restored within a half hour, in many places much sooner than that.

A B.C. Hydro spokesman said the specific cause of the fault in the submarine cable has not been determined but is being investigated.

Gas Cuts Next

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States faces a gasoline shortage this spring and summer that could be as serious as the current drought of fuel oil, a Senate sub-committee was told Thursday.

"We are most definitely facing a very serious gasoline crisis," Robert de Blois, chairman of the board of the New England Fuel Institute, told the sub-committee on executive reorganization and government research.

"It's going to affect the independent section of the gasoline business first. It's already happening a little in New England but more in the Midwest."

Bombs in Books

LONDONDERRY (AP) — northern Ireland guerrillas have added a new twist to terror warfare — booby-trapped library books. (see also Page 3).

Bad enough for those among us with two left feet when it comes time to cross a trestle like the one over Selkirk Waters. Consider the added doubts when you have four paws, two of them way back there. You can do it, Russ Dunaway tells his dubious dog Mitz. I'll help, he suggests to his agitated animal. But Mitz looked down, then laid down. He'd done it before. But not today.

No Break in 'Bonus'

By GEORGE OAKE
Times Staff

In an age of easy and practically unlimited credit some people end up owing their soul to the company store, incurring debts that will burden them for many years.

Earlier this week MLA David Brousson (L—North Vancouver-Capilano) complained in the legislature about lending practices among some mortgage companies.

Desperately needing money, a Victoria woman approached Modern Finance, 229 Columbia Street, New Westminster in the hope of borrowing $4,200 to consolidate her debts. Modern Finance was willing to do business on the basis of a first mortgage on the woman's home.

An agreement dated Jan. 11, 1971, was drawn up between the woman and Modern Finance, assigning the mortgage to Jacston Securities, 430 Columbia Street, New Westminster.

The debt which the woman signed for was $6,000 rather than the $4,200 which she had borrowed.

Why?

Because some finance companies tack on a lump sum to the amount borrowed calling it a "bonus or discount".

It is all perfectly legal, and according to Miss Whitehead, gullible finance company customers often think the terms "bonus" or discount mean that they are getting some kind of financial break.

Not so. The finance company is getting all the breaks.

On top of the bonus the Victoria woman agreed to pay she was also saddled with a 21 per cent interest rate on the lump sum of $6,000, plus another $300 in legal fees.

The lady made her first payment of $110.77 on Feb. 15, 1971. To date she has paid back $2,058.48. After her Feb. 15 payment of this month — 24 months later — she still owes $6,004.

At $110 monthly payments a little more than $5 would be coming off the principal for a considerable time, says Miss Whitehead.

On welfare, and realizing she was in deep financial trouble, the lady sought once again to consolidate her debts. Unsolicited, she received an offer of help from United Mortgage Ltd., Suite 202, 895 Fort Street.

The letter, signed by V. R. Kruschel, said in part, "United Mortgages is engaged in placing mortgages regardless of credit rating or personal circumstances."

Instead, the lady was referred to the Greater Victoria Savings Credit Union by a social service agency.

Out of her $149 monthly welfare cheque the lady must pay $110 on her loan, leaving her with $39 to live on. The credit union is trying at present to get her total payment down to $60 a month.

At the current rate of repayment when will the lady be debt free — five years, 10 years?

"She won't be out of debt for a longer period than that," says Miss Whitehead.

SENIORS GIVEN GRANTS

Three senior citizens' groups in Greater Victoria have received grants worth a total of $18,635 under the federal government's New Horizons program.

The Senior Citizens' Campaign Council of Greater Victoria has been awarded $12,000 to expand services to sick and bed-ridden pensioners.

This group of volunteers — most are more than 70 years of age — visits and telephones shut-ins, provides sheets, blankets and dressing gowns for those unable to afford them and performs services such as letter writing, shopping and driving the elderly to treatment centres.

Members work closely with the Victorian Order of Nurses, Meals on Wheels, the Red Cross and other social agencies.

The Hampton Musical Entertainment Group of the Saanich Senior Citizens' Activity Centre has been awarded $5,500. The group includes an old-time band, a choir and a concert orchestra.

Band leader Frank Boon said the money will be used for transportation, instrument maintenance and music.

The group entertains senior citizens, shut-ins and hospital patients all over southern Vancouver Island.

A group of artists called the Victoria Pals of the Palette have received $1,135 to rent facilities in bad weather. Members are all senior citizens and some have suffered strokes or have other handicaps.

Mace Plans Vetoed; Court Battle Looms

The taxpayers of the city of Victoria appear headed for a $1 million court battle with real estate development promoter J. A. Mace, following a city council decision Thursday against a land-use contract for Mace's 29-storey Bay Village high-rise project.

Mace said today he does not acknowledge the validity of an emotion-packed public hearing attended by about 150 people which preceded council's four-four vote (a two-thirds majority was required to okay the contract.

Less Dense

He will proceed with his suit for damages against the city, and try to force the city to issue him a building permit to start excavations at the three-acre Simcoe and Menzies site.

Mayor Peter Pollen says he now wants: "Less density, purely and simply. Density reflecting the scale of the community. Certainly some open space — social, environmental, recreational considerations."

Mace, who claims he already has a land-use contract for the Bay Village project, although it has never been signed by Mayor Pollen, says his proposal is not too dense for the site.

"We worked with the city for over two years to reach this plan in 1970. We only waited until 1971 to seek the land-use contract because there was contract legislation under way in the legislature," he commented.

Thursday's public hearing received 22 letters, 18 protesting Bay Village shopping and apartment centre, and four in favor.

Eight speakers appeared, all protesting the project except one. Mace did not atttend the meeting.

The final vote went: In favor of a contract, Aldermen Percy Frampton, Alf Hood, Mike Young and Clyde Savage.

Many Suggestions

"I may say this gives me the greatest happiness since I've been mayor," Pollen told aldermen after they had made their swift decision towards the end of city business, 90 minutes after the crowds had left the council chamber.

Suggestions raised at the hearings ranged from mandatory publication of financial statements by companies making profits out of land development to increased emphasis on tall high-rise towers to concentrate housing and save open space.

Kay Lines, 27 South Turner, said : "We should know who exactly is investing money in these development projects." She said the city should enforce a profit rate equivalent to Canada Savings Bonds on land developers. Finances should be disclosed by law.

Maurice Johnson, solicitor on behalf of James Bay Community Association, said the city had not fully abided by the requirements of clause 702 (a) of the Municipal Act governing land-use contract applications.

Johnson said James Bay should be considered a satellite area of Victoria because of its limited access between Beacon Hill Park and the Causeway.

A spokesman for Menzies Street Merchants' Association said merchants were opposed to the introduction of a "large impersonal business monopoly."

Monte Vanton, 157 Barkley Terrace, Oak Bay, said "the syndrome of many high-rise developers is dog eat dog — there is no heart, there is no hope, there is no design."

Offers Cash

Vanton said a fund should be launched to fight the lawsuit Mace has started against the city. He pledged $100 towards the fund and called on others to donate anything from $1.

Mrs. H. C. L. Ransom, a resident of Lord and Lady Simcoe apartments overlooking the projected Bay Village site, said she could not understand what happened to the city when the Bay Village project was approved.

"Was it because a respected member of the advisory planning commission was the architect for the shopping centre?"

She said there was not enough time for presentations to be prepared for the 1971 public hearing on the Bay Village project. "Council voted in two minutes."

John Warren, 855 North Park, said new information showed that council's original decision was "inept" and council should not go forward.

Bill McKechnie, 634 Avalon, said Mace did not have a good case against the city. "He's suing, but for what?"

"He's going on a quasi-contract, something like a breach of promise. He will have to produce bona fide evidence of damage to the tune of $1 million. That figure is pure smoke-screen."

McKechnie said the city should try to negotiate with Mace for an alternative development.

Richard Talbot, manager of Anglo-Canadian Property Management Ltd., lone spokesman in favor of the project, said he favored tall, slender towers rather than "slabs".

Special Mill Rate Urged For Commercial Property

Businesses Feel Crunch

Victoria city council should plan a special reduced mill rate for commercial properties if the provincial government goes ahead with plans to remove the 10 per cent ceiling on commercial assessments, the Victoria Chamber of Commerce said today.

A statement prepared by chamber president Terry Farmer said commercial assessments could increase an average of 43 per cent in one year if the 10 per cent limit is removed.

Other municipalities would also have to have a contingency plan for special reduced mill rates on business to keep many of them from going bankrupt, he said.

The statement was released at a meeting of chamber directors at the Strathcona Hotel at noon today.

The chamber urged the provincial government to take a second look at plans to remove the 10 per cent ceiling.

Farmer's statement said:

"The inflationary aspect of this act is obvious but what is even more alarming is the number of small firms that will find that they cannot immediately increase their prices and in the interim they will find their working capital depleted by the payment of the increased tax.

"They could then be forced to liquidate their business or declare bankruptcy. The larger cabin stores will possibly find that they can absorb the increase in taxes until prices can be raised but the smaller independent firms cannot.

"The businessman is quickly discovering that new restrictions and levies such as the minimum wage, the increase in corporate taxes by the provincial government and now the increased property taxes are just going to be too much. The question has now been raised — is the provincial government out to get the small businessman?"

The chamber said if the provincial government does not reconsider the act, the City of Victoria and other municipalities should set up a contingency plan of a separate reduced mill rate for commercial properties in their area.

The chamber also expressed determination to carry on its campaign for a late night ferry between Vancouver and Victoria.

The chamber was strongly ciritical of Highway Minister Robert Strachan for cancelling plans for a late ferry crossing, especially in view of the election campaign promise by Esquimalt MLA James Gorst that the service would be provided by an NDP government.

The provincial government "should live up to its stated commitment and immediately fulfill the pressing needs of the Greater Victoria area," the chamber said.

QUERY SPARKS CLASH

Introduction of an unusual parliamentary procedure resulted in Mayor Peter Pollen being forced to curtail a line of questioning at Thursday's highly-charged Bay Village shopping centre public hearing.

The mayor interrupted property manager Richard Talbot as Talbot showed a picture of the Bay Village 29-storey tower and described the tower as resting on three acres of "ground."

"This is going to be on an immense concrete pad, not ground," the mayor interjected. "These wild statements some of you people make must be challenged by legitimate and conscientious people."

"You manage Westsea (sic) Developments at Fort and View — would you say that's an acceptable project?" the mayor asked, in an apparent attempt to show that Talbot had an interest in a "slab-type" apartment building of the type Talbot had condemned.

Ald. Mike Young, who later voted in favor of a Bay Village contract, leapt to his feet and demanded: "Is this the place for a cross-examination? Intimidation and inquisition are utterly inappropriate."

The mayor: "To suggest I am running an inquisition is suggestive of a torture chamber . . . I am chief magistrate of this city and I can be heard."

Young: "I feel inquiries into other properties is beyond the matter at hand."

The mayor called for a vote sustaining the chair — e.g. the mayor — and it was defeated.

Aldermen Mike Young, Alf Hood, Percy Frampton and Clyde Savage had effectively overruled the mayor in his line of questioning. All four aldermen subsequently voted in favor of a Bay Village contract.

Talbot explained that he managed only the shopping centre portion of a development which he referred to as Westpark.

"To suggest I have shown any bias is preposterous," the mayor remarked.

Q. A firm in Burnaby used to process old wool and cottons. Is this company still in existence and what is its address? — M.G.H.

A. Project Recycle and Goodwill Enterprises for the Handicapped have no knowledge of any such company in Burnaby. The Goodwill sends used materials of all kinds to Western Wool Stocks, 291 Parker Street, Vancouver.

Gunman Routed

A 20-year-old man who was struck on the head with his own gun by the shopkeeper he tried to rob today pleaded guilty to attempted armed robbery.

James Michael Smith, of no fixed address, was remanded for sentence later today in provincial court by Judge William Ostler.

Smith walked into a small grocery store at 1608 Camosun around 8:30 p.m. Thursday, after apparently casing the shop earlier in the day.

After asking the storekeeper for a package of cigarettes, he pulled a .22 air pistol from a holster at his waist and told the woman:

"This is a holdup, Mrs. Graham."

When Mrs. Vera Graham, the storekeeper, refused to hand over the contents of the till, some $50 to $60, Smith went behind the counter.

Mrs. Graham said today she had "no time to get afraid . . . I just hung on to the gun as long as I could."

Mrs. Graham was treated Thursday night for bruises to her left arm.

Smith was picked up by police shortly after on Bay Street, and later identified in a police lineup by his victim. He then admitted the offence.

Gov't to Control Land Use in Province

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

A Provincial Land Commission with sweeping powers to control land use in British Columbia and designate land for agricultural, greenbelt, recreational or urban land bank purposes will be set up under legislation introduced Thursday by Agriculture minister Dave Stupich.

The five-member commission will get $25 million for buying up agricultural land in the province and another $33 million for the other purchases from special funds already provided for parkland, greenbelt, and land bank acquisition.

One of the key provisions of the legislation is that there is no automtic right to compensation for land designated under any of the four categories.

This means, Stupich told a press conference immediately after the Land Commission Act was given first reading, that the government doesn't admit that in designating land for any of the four purposes "we have affected its value."

Equally, however, it doesn't mean the land won't be purchased, he said.

He stressed there is no power of expropriation in the act and nothing that will stop the farmer from selling his land to anyone.

"But the purchaser knows that if it is designated farmland the odds are he will never be able to do anything but farm it," unless he can show why the land should be exempted.

Under the legislation, any bylaw or regulation of a municipality or regional district which conflicts with the provisions of the act or its accompanying regulations is declared invalid.

Stupich said he expects the legislation will be passed at this session of the legislature and proclaimed by the end of April.

One section of the act incorporates the provisions of the order-in-council passed last Dec. 21, under which no local authority may rezone agricultural land to any other use and no buildings may be erected on farmland. The legislation, when passed, will supersede that order and be retroactive to Dec. 21.

Stupich said he expects to start approaching people to serve on the commission within two or three weeks. His department has already started working out "gross boundaries," defining the various areas of land in B.C. that have been designated for agricultural, greenbelt, recreational or land bank purposes.

These boundaries, he said, will also likely be known by the end of April.

Any landowner who feels his property should not have been designated may appeal for exemption, but this exemption will have to be approved by the provincial cabinet.

Not all such applications need be on an individual basis, however, Stupich said. In some cases involving land on the outskirts of municipalities whose agricultural value was questionable, dozens of applications might be dealt with in a blanket decision.

FARM PROTEST

VERNON (CP) — The president of the British Columbia Federation of Agriculture, Charles Bernhardt, has called on farmers to take strong action against the government's proposed new farmland preservation legislation. Bernhardt said today he will recommend to B.C. growers that they cease work on this year's crop.

He said it's clear the provincial government has an absolute disregard for the individual land owner and certainly for the farmer. The federation will protest in whatever manner it can, he said, with the possibility of a protest demonstration in Victoria.

Door Slams On Mining

By BRIAN BUTTERS
Times Staff

The provincial government slammed the door shut Thursday on future mineral development in all B.C. parks.

The news came in the legislature from Resources Minister Bob Williams, who announced a sweeping new policy for land use within the province's network of provincial parks, coming down particularly hard on the operations of Western Mines in Strathcona Provincial Park on Vancouver Island. The minister also announced plans to establish a number of new parks throughout the province.

Williams said Western Mines will have to abide by the following rules if it wishes to continue its operations in Strathcona:

—Application must be made to the parks branch before any timber is removed from the park.

—A permit for construction of a townsite at Ralph River, granted by the former Social Credit administration, is to be rescinded.

—Plans for disposing of tailings from the mine operation will first have to be cleared through the parks branch.

—Stumpage rates being charged Western Mines will be three times the going rate for operations inside Strathcona.

—Damming of lakes and streams in the area around the mine's operations to provide power will not be allowed.

Williams also said it will be "useless" for any mining companies to either stake or attempt to record any mineral claims inside any provincial park territory. Any pending claims on territory inside five B.C. parks he named will be denied by the authorities within his department.

Williams said legislation will be introduced this session to bring control of waterways inside provincial parks back to the parks branch, where he said it had been before the Social Credit government

$ Drubbed: Monetary Crisis Looms

Times News Services

The U.S. dollar took a drubbing in panicky trading on European money markets today, bringing hints of a new monetary crisis. The price of gold zoomed to new highs touching $95 an ounce but later settled to $85.

The dollar steadied after government banks intervened and bought up dollars to keep it at the price set by the recent 10 per cent devaluation.

"Something has to be done," one London currency dealer said when the dollar sank to its lowest point since devaluation. "We can't go on like this."

Gold skyrocketed to $95 per ounce early today on London's free market and went to new highs in Zurich, Rome and Hong Kong.

But at the London afternoon price fixing the price dropped for the first time in two weeks.

The dollar's plunge and gold's climb were directly related.

London dealers said speculators and international money managers simply did not trust the dollar over the weekend, when exchanges are closed and government decisions on currency rates usually come.

They were switching instead into almost anything else — gold, silver, Swiss francs, marks, tin, copper, even the once-weak British pound.

A West German government spokesman said the central bank intervention was brief and small scale — it bought less than $10 million, compared with the $6 billion it bought in the crisis before dollar devaluation two weeks ago.

Arab World Seethes

Times News Services

The Arab world today seethed with demands for revenge against Israel for the shooting down of a Libyan airliner over the Sinai Desert.

The semi-official Cairo newspaper Al Ahram today called on Arab guerrillas to strike Israeli targets throughout the world "to show that in this jungle the Israeli wolf is not supreme."

And Egyptian vice-president Hussein Shaffei hinted today that his nation may end the shaky Middle East ceasefire and resume its "war of attrition" with Israel.

"If the enemy wants to scare us, we will tell him we are waiting in our positions here and as a minimum we can get him back to the situation of 1970 and make him exhausted," Shafei said.

In 1969, and up until Aug. 7, 1970, when a U.S.-initiated ceasefire took effect, Egypt and Israel fought almost daily artillery duels and staged raids across the Suez Canal.

"We ask God to give us strength to make the enemy exhausted through guerrilla action and political and economic means," Shafei said.

"We are a nation of faith and know that Israel is not liked by anybody in this world . . . the Zionists are the enemies of humanity and they cannot find anybody to love them," he said.

In Rabat, King Hassan II of Morocco, regarded by the West as a moderate, said he will send army troops to Syria to fight Israel. Previously, he has refused to commit Moroccan troops to such action.

U.S. Resumes Bombing Laos

Times News Services

The United States has resumed limited air activity over Laos in response to a request from Laotian Premier Souvanna Phouma.

However, officials in Washington said details would have come from the U.S. Pacific Command in Honolulu.

White House press secretary Ronald Ziegler said, meanwhile, that the U.S. is hopeful that the ceasefire would be fully implemented soon and that the renewed fighting would end.

"Since the cease-fire agreement went into effect at noon Thursday there have been 29 recorded violations throughout the kingdom. About 90 per cent of the violations have been committed by foreign troops," Souvanna said.

"I am certainly sure that the United States will respond positively to the request for resumption of the bombing. You will soon hear the other side's reaction about the resumption of the bombing."

In Cambodia, military sources reported heavy casualties on both sides Thursday in a series of attacks by Communist Khmer Rouge guerrillas against three outposts south of Phnom Penh.

In reports of fighting in what is the last official war in Southeast Asia, western military sources said about 2,000 Communists fighting along Highways 2 and 3 are the same guerrillas who cut Highway 1 linking Phnom Penh and Saigon earlier this month.

In Vietnam, procedural disputes among the four members of a truce-keeping team again delayed investigations today into two cases involving violations of the Jan. 28 cease-fire.

Meanwhile, External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp flies to Paris tonight for the international conference that is purported to guarantee the peace in Vietnam. But informed observers expect little more from the meeting than a rubber stamp on the Jan. 27 ceasefired agreement.

Crown Books Open

For the first time B.C. Hydro books will come under the detailed scrutiny of the legislature's public accounts committee — as soon as next week — to be followed by two other Crown corporations, B.C. Railway and the Liquor Control Board.

At the committee's first business meeting today there was unanimous approval of a motion by Pat McGeer (L — Vancouver-Point Grey) that Hydro's board of directors be asked to send Hydro chairman David Cass-Beggs and any officials considered necessary to help him answer committee questions on Hydro accounts for the fiscal year ending March 31, 1972.

PERSONAL APPEARANCE

McGeer said a personal appearance before the committee is essential because the public accounts relating to Hydro are in such consolidated form that it is impossible to pick out points of detail.

McGeer also said he wants the committee to use the procedure for detailed examination of the accounts of B.C. Railway and the Liquor Control Board, in that order.

On another motion from the MLA, it was agreed that individual committee members will be allowed the help of personal staff, including secretaries and special assistants, in taking notes from government vouchers that are made available for inspection on request.

Such facilities are needed, he said, if MLAs are to be saved many hours of laborious note-taking. As an example, McGeer cited the difficulty involved last year in probing the "rather strange" and bulky travel vouchers relating to Phil Gaglardi, the former Social Credit rehabilitation minister.

Earlier, when comptroller-general John Minty told the committee about customary arrangements for voucher examination, with his own staff in attendance to help MLAs, McGeer reacted testily.

"Public accounts must be public accounts," he said.

Socred Plea to Commons

Members of the Social Credit caucus in the B.C. legislature, today, asked the House of Commons to set up a special committee to overturn legislation introduced Thursday by the NDP government which controls all land development in the province. (Earlier reaction on Page 2).

In a telegram to Prime Minister Trudeau party leader Frank Richter said the legislation is an enfringement on the basic right of the individual—granted, he said, in the Canadian Bill of Rights — to enjoyment of property.

He said the special committee should hold hearings around the province and recommend to Parliament that the legislation be overturned if it is found to be contrary to the Bill of Rights.

Richter said he was unaware of any precedent for a committee of the House of Commons to overthrow provincial government legislation "but we've never had such vicious legislation as this before," he said.

"The ramifications of this bill are not being understood by the people," Richter said. "Not just farmland, but all land in the province is affected."

WORLD WE LIVE IN FAST GOING MAD

Times News Services

TORONTO — Even if the world doesn't come to a bad end through over-population and pollution, changing conditions may drive everybody crazy, says Dr. Daniel Cappon, a psychiatrist and professor of environmental studies at York University in Toronto.

He posed the questions:

Is mental pollution rather than chemical pollution the real threat to mankind, especially in North America?

Will the din of industrial construction, the tensions of over-crowding, and the stresses of the "rat race" life in large cities eventually drive large segments of the population literally mad?

And will ultimately only the "intellectually elite" survive in any strength to carry on the human race to bigger and better things — only the mentally superior who are able to best cope with and adjust to life's growing "psycho-social bombardment"?

Most important, has this "survival of the mentally fittest" process already begun?

Cappon said "yes" to all his own questions.

And he suggested to science writers Thursday at the Ontario Science Centre that in this context, man's "limits to mental growth" may be the crucial factor in determining how and perhaps whether man survives even intellectually, especially if little is done to attack the causes of today's multifaceted environmental problems.

Cappon noted that there has been a massive increase in the rate of mental illness, emotional and psychosomatic illness in recent years "to the point that every other person living on Manhattan Island is receiving or in need of psychiatric care."

He detailed other symptoms of the accelerating alienation and psychological disturbances among the populace, concluding that it would seem that unless these problems are overcome and the trends are reversed, "we've had it anyway, mentally if not physically."

But do not fear.

Cappon, after painting a rather disturbing picture of the possible magnitude and consequences of mental pollution, adds that he is optimistic about the outcome.

First, he thinks that man will solve the problems of physical pollutants without too much difficulty. And, with this in mind, he calls for restraint in "dooms-day" predictions, since this tends to stir up the anxieties of people and make the psychological problems worse.

The mental pollution problem is a different kettle of fish, containing good and bad.

On the one hand, he suggests a large number of people are going to succumb to the increasing "psycho-social bombardment."

On the other hand, he firmly believes in the capacity of man's brain to improve and, it is hoped, to adapt to mental stresses.

He suggests that only the "intellectual elite" will likely be able to take advantage of this mental flexibility and brainpower reserve in adapting to the changing environment.

Shafts Pierce Darkened House

The comments flew thick and fast through the murk Thursday afternoon when the lights went out for five minutes in the legislature.

The blackout, caused by a high-voltage fault in the submarine transmission cables which supply Vancouver Island from the mainland was general on the island, and lasted between five and 30 minutes.

Speaker Gordon Dowding recessed the legislature after members pointed out that the Hansard recording equipment was not working during the power failure.

Remarks caught by reporters, if not by Hansard equipment, were:

To the NDP from the Social Credit opposition: "You finally did it — you turned off all the lights in the province."

To the Liberals, who were about to move non-confidence in the government: "Just another stalling tactic."

To restore power, all island generation was increased and the standby gas turbine station at Chemainus was brought into operation. Service was mostly restored within a half hour, in many places much sooner than that.

A B.C. Hydro spokesman said the specific cause of the fault in the submarine cable has not been determined but is being investigated.

Gas Cuts Next

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States faces a gasoline shortage this spring and summer that could be as serious as the current drought of fuel oil, a Senate sub-committee was told Thursday.

"We are most definitely facing a very serious gasoline crisis," Robert de Blois, chairman of the board of the New England Fuel Institute, told the sub-committee on executive reorganization and government research.

"It's going to affect the independent section of the gasoline business first. It's already happening a little in New England but more in the Midwest."
